One half the annual premium may remain on loan, as an offset in part of the profits accruing to the party insured—which have thus far authorized yearly a dividend of 35 per cent. on the gross amount of premiums.

The amounts from $200 to $10,000 each.

Largest amount taken on any one risk, $10,000.

All the premiums earned by the Company are paid to it, and no member pays in his note or money against the notes (good or bad) of other members.

Every person who is insured thereby becomes a member of the Company, and has a right to vote at its meetings; he also, from the time of taking out his policy, has a proportional interest in the accumulated fund of the Company, which has gone on regularly increasing since commencing business, and promises favorably for future distributions of profits; and this fund, with the guaranty fund of $50,000, gives a strong assurance of the solidity and stability of the Company.

P R E F A C E .

IN preparing the third volume of the Massachusetts State Record for the press, we have been influenced by the same motives and wishes which we fully expressed in the first and second volumes.

We have endeavored to fill our pages with useful information, and to secure accuracy. We have sent our usual circulars to correspondents in all the towns of the Commonwealth, and to the clerks of the several courts, but we regret to say that all have not made returns. Without returns from every town, and from every county, we cannot hope to avoid errors. The Records at the State House furnish us with the names of all citizens honored by the Executive with commissions,—but they do no more. Deaths and removals may take place, but we have no means of knowing details except through our correspondents in the country. We shall esteem it a favor if professional gentlemen will advise us of their doings and changes. We make the same request of institutions and associations. Indeed, we shall always take pleasure in noticing all commendable objects, whether pursued by individuals or by societies,—having the good of the community in view. It is our wish fully to represent the institutions, the industry, and numerous resources of Massachusetts,—and we extend a cordial invitation to all who may possess interesting and useful information,—to make contributions for insertion. We have received a large amount of useful information which is unavailable at present, for the reason that our returns upon the subjects to which it relates are not yet complete.

Several valuable articles have been reluctantly omitted for the want of room. Some returns were received too late to be available, but where the corrections were important, we have noted them in the usual place.

We owe our best thanks to correspondents for their favors and good wishes. Our acknowledgments are specially due to J. B. Felt, B. H. Currier, and to J. B. Robb, Esquires, and to the Rev. J. S. Clarke, and Edward Jarvis, M.D.

All communications intended for the Record, should be addressed to the Editor, Boston, on or before October 1st, 1849.

ERRATA.—The list of City Officers for Charlestown, furnished and printed on pages 293-4, was correct only for 1847-8. The following should be substituted. Aldermen, Ward No. 1, John L. Magnitude at the middle of the Eclipse, 8.86 digits on the Moon's southern limb.

* Taken from The Illustrated Family Christian Almanac, published by the Tract Society.

III. Sun eclipsed at the time of New Moon, August 18, in the morning, (17th, in the evening, in the western States,) invisible. This Eclipse will be visible in most of the Indian Ocean, in the south-east part of Africa, in Madagascar, and in the southern parts of Australia. It will be central and total on the meridian, in longitude 91° east from Greenwich, and latitude $36^{\circ} 8'$ south.

IV. Moon eclipsed September 2, at the time of Full Moon in the afternoon, (morning in the western States,) invisible. Visible in the opposite hemisphere. Magnitude, 7.09 digits on the Moon's northern limb.

The Moon in an Eclipse falls into the shadow of the Earth, and the quantity and duration of the Eclipse are therefore precisely the same for all places where the Moon is visible. But in Eclipses of the Sun there is a difference in absolute time, in duration, magnitude, etc. One place may have an annular or total Eclipse; another, with the Sun high in the heavens, may have no Eclipse during the day.

THE ATMOSPHERE AND ITS PHENOMENA.*

THE earth is surrounded by an immense aërial ocean — an invisible and highly elastic fluid — which accompanies it in all its movements. Although not a necessary appendage to our globe, yet it is an indispensable agent in the economy of terrestrial conditions, as regards animal and vegetable life. All land animals, including the human species, being immersed in this fluid, they may be said, as really as the fishes of the deep, to inhabit an ocean. Equally important is it as an agent in the innumerable changes which unceasingly occur in the inanimate materials composing our planet. That the atmosphere and its phenomena should have, at all times, excited a great deal of inquiry, is, therefore, not surprising; but, notwithstanding the importance of a knowledge of the composition and properties of the atmosphere, a special description of them would be out of place here, as the design of this work is limited to general views of these subjects. These general views will be mostly confined to those properties of the atmosphere which have a relation to the laws of climate and its influence upon the animal and vegetable kingdoms.

THE COMPOSITION AND PROPERTIES OF THE ATMOSPHERE.

As regards the proofs of the existence of an atmosphere, it is deemed sufficient to mention the resistance it offers to bodies in motion and the color it gives to the etherial vault. That it is a substance possessing the essential properties of matter, is evident from the resistance it offers to the occupation of its place by other bodies; and that it is a fluid is equally obvious from the facility with which bodies move in it, from its passing with great ease through openings the most minute, and from its pressing equally in every direction.

Regarding its composition, the most vague and fanciful notions prevailed for many ages. By the ancients, it was considered as one of the elements; but the discoveries of Black, Cavendish, Priestly, Scheele, and Lavoisier, have proved it to be a compound, of which the chief, and perhaps the only essential component substances, are the two gases called oxygen and nitrogen. The analysis of air, which is no easy problem, presents, according to many chemists, 21 parts by volume of oxygen to 79 of nitrogen — a proportion sensibly the same, whether the air is obtained from the level of the sea or a mountain top, from the polar or tropical regions, from the most healthy or insalubrious localities. But Dr. Prout alleges, that if the two gases are really combined, they ought, according to the laws of definite proportions, to be 20 oxygen to 80 nitrogen. The atmosphere contains other substances, which, occurring only in small and variable quantities, are rather to be considered as foreign bodies. It always contains, according to Dr. Black, carbonic acid gas; but although Saussure found it in the air brought from the top of Mont Blanc, and Humboldt in that from near the summit of the Andes, yet, as the companions of La Perouse failed to detect its presence on the top of the peak of Teneriffe, it may be sometimes absent. At all events, it has been determined by M. Saussure, the younger, if we are to give credit to his experiments, that the quantity in the atmosphere varies with the seasons and certain meteorological changes: as, for instance, it contains more in the three winter than in the three summer months, and at night more than in the day—less after heavy rains and a thaw, but more after a long-continued frost. It is obvious, however, that the quantity of carbonic acid in the atmosphere, if we except confined apartments, is subject to slight variation. According to Dr. Dalton, the difference never exceeds from 1-1400th to 1-1000th of the whole air. In confined apartments, however, when the oxygen is rapidly consumed by the process of combustion and respiration, the quantity of carbonic acid is much increased. This vitiation of the air, with its fatal consequences, was too well illustrated in the catastrophe of the miserable prisoner in the Black Hole in Calcutta in 1756; and in that of the two men who, some years since, in England, after descending in a diving-bell, were cut off from a fresh supply of air. The same fact is illustrated in the Grotta del Cane, the air of which is speedily fatal to a dog, while a man enters it with impunity; the explanation of which is found in the circumstance that, as the carbonic acid which issues from crevices in the floor, fills the bottom of the cave to the level of the entrance, and then flows out by its superior gravity, the upper part of the grotto is free from the noxious impregnations.

Aqueous vapor is also present in the atmosphere in variable quantities between one and one and a half per cent. Water in a state of vapor is invariably present; but its proportion is modified by the degree of temperature, and by changes in the barometric pressure of the air. Many other gases may be detected, as all substances that can assume the aerial form at common temperatures must be occasionally found in it; but these depend on local causes, and are variable in amount.

As regards the mode in which the gaseous principles entering into the composition of atmospheric air are united together, much difference of opinion has existed among philosophers. Some have maintained that they exist simply in a state of mixture; others consider them as chemically united. As it is a law in chemistry that bodies combine in definite proportions, (that is, that one volume of one gas always combines with one, two, or more similar volumes of the same or of another gas, without any intermediate fractional part,) and as it has been determined that the oxygen and nitrogen of the atmosphere are in the proportion of one volume of the former to four of the latter, it was very natural to suppose that they must be chemically combined. But although the constituent elements of the atmosphere are united together in proportions adapted to form a chemical compound; yet, from the experiments made by Mr. Dalton, it is probable that they are only mixed, or that the particles of the one are merely diffused among those of the other, in the mode that the minute portions of carbonic acid gas and of vapor are known to be diffused through the whole atmosphere. The fundamental principle of this explanation consists in the assumption, that the molecules of all gaseous bodies possess a power of self-repulsion—that is to say, the particles are repulsive of one another in preference to others on the same principle that in the solid state they are self-attractive, or attract one another in preference to others. Hence, when different gaseous bodies are mixed together, they do not, like liquids, arrange themselves according to their specific gravities, but the molecules of each gas are diffused equally throughout the whole space occupied by the mixture. This theory is supported by M. Dulong, who has proved by experiments that the refractive power of the atmospheric air is precisely equal to the sum of the refractive powers of its elements. This constitution of the atmosphere is of the greatest importance, being, as it were, the grand conservative principle, which prevents any unequal distribution of the elements of the atmosphere, which would speedily prove fatal to organic life. Thus at all habitable heights above the level of the sea, the air must have a nearly uniform composition; and if a little more oxygen is consumed in one spot than in another, the loss is instantly supplied; whereas if the principle of diffusion did not exist, the whole atmosphere, as the deficiency could not be compensated, might be described as consisting of patches of different gases.

Having explained the chemical composition of atmospheric air, its physical properties will require some notice. Its density diminishes as we recede from the earth, and its expansibility is in the inverse ratio of the force by which it is compressed. Heat and diminution of pressure are two agencies which are especially active in expanding air. Its density is farther affected by the admixture of watery vapor, by the decreasing force of terrestrial gravitation, and the increasing attraction of the heavenly bodies in proportion to the augmentation of its distance from the surface of the earth. At the same time, the elasticity of air, the temperature being the same, increases proportionally with its density, or inversely as the space it occupies; for, if the lower stratum o the atmosphere were freed from the pressure which confines it to its present bulk, its elasticity would cause it to expand and fill a much larger space. Experiment and calculation have proved that for equal ascents above the earth's surface, this decrease of density is in what is called geometrical progression. Thus at three miles in height, the density of the atmosphere is equal to a column of mercury fifteen inches in height, being only one-half of what it is at the surface of the earth; at six miles, the barometer would have an elevation of seven and a half inches, or about one-fourth of its usual height; at nine miles of altitude, it would stand at three inches and three quarters; and at fifteen miles, nearly at one inch only. By far the greater portion of the atmosphere is always within fifteen or twenty miles of the earth's surface; and the inference that the utmost limit of the atmosphere cannot exceed forty-five miles in altitude, is warranted by the nicest observations on the duration of twilight, as well as some other phenomena in astronomy. This height, however, must vary with latitude; for, in consequence of the rotation of the earth upon its axis, and the greater and more direct influence of the solar heat upon the earth's equatorial regions, the atmosphere must necessarily be higher there than in the polar regions, while the lowest altitude of the atmosphere must be exhibited at the poles.

This decrease of the density of the air in geometrical progression as we ascend in the atmosphere, is not, however, exactly the law of nature. Were the temperature and the force of gravity uniform at all heights above the earth's surface, the law would be correct; but it is found that the temperature, as we ascend, does not decrease according to any fixed law. Hence, as the relation between the density and altitude is not of a steady character, it can only be determined in a particular case by observing the pressure, temperature, and hygrometric state of the air.

It thus appears that weight and pressure are properties of the air, as of all other bodies. Although this was conjectured even by the ancients, yet they, as well as the world at large until comparatively modern times, pronounced all the phenomena now known to be the results of the weight and elasticity of the air, to a principle called nature's abhorrence of a vacuum. This dogma was universally received so late as the early part of the seventeenth century, when it was still believed that the ascent of water in pumps was owing to this principle, and that by means of suction fluids might be raised to any height whatever. At this period, it was accidentally discovered that water could not be raised in a pump, when the so-called sucker was more than thirty-two feet from the water; but the philosophers of the day, unable to look beyond the dogma they had received from ancient masters, decided, upon mature consideration, that nature does not abhor a vacuum to a height greater than thirty-two feet. But Galileo, though still inclining to the old opinion, conjectured that the cause of the water's ascent, instead of being the power of suction, was the pressure of the atmosphere on the surface of the well; or, in other words, that a column of water thirty-two feet high is a counterpoise to one of air on an equal base, but reaching to the top of the atmosphere. Torricelli, a disciple of Galileo, profiting by this hint, conceived the happy idea of testing its truth by using mercury instead of water.

STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

TOWNS IN MASSACHUSETTS.

UNDER this head, it is intended to present the names, incorporation, and other statistical facts of all the towns which do belong or have belonged to our Commonwealth. As one part of the plan, our attention is first called to the territory which has been taken from this State and added to New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, and New York.*

CONNECTICUT.

After protracted discussions, Connecticut, as an equivalent for Suffield and Enfield, which then included Somers and Woodstock, received in 1713, of Massachusetts, territory to the amount of 107,793 acres. This land was sold by Connecticut, though they did not refuse to allow these same towns to come under their jurisdiction. For this purpose, such towns perceiving the taxes of Connecticut to be less than those of Massachusetts at that period, and being in arrears to the latter province, made proposals to the former province in 1747, which were afterwards, though not immediately, accepted. William Murray, Earl of Mansfield, gave his opinion, that such proposals should not have been complied with by Connecticut. Still Massachusetts taxed these towns till 1779, as an indication of claim to them.

SUFFIELD, May 27, 1674. Southfield.—Allowed to be a Plantation Oct. 1670. Settled, 1671.

ENFIELD, May 16, 1688. Fresh Water Brook.—Part of Springfield. Granted to be a Township, May 18, 1683.

WOODSTOCK, March 15, 1690. New Roxbury.—Granted to inhabitants of Roxbury, Oct. 1683. Permitted to be a Plantation Jan. 31, 1685. Judge Sewall wrote the ensuing extract in his MS. diary. "1690, March 18, I gave New Roxbury the name of Woodstock, because of its nearness to Oxford, for the sake of Queen Elizabeth, and the notable meetings that have been held at the place, bearing that name in England."

SOMERS, July 4, 1734.—East Precinct of Enfield.

* See Vol. II. page 31. This important statistical article was communicated by J. B. Felt, Esq. to the American Statistical Association. It will be continued in future volumes.

In addition to these, Southertown, or Stonington, was anciently part of Massachusetts. This place was supposed to be included in a grant to them by the Earl of Warwick and Council for British America, December 10, 1643, and was settled by persons who went thither under John Winthrop, Jr., in 1646. It was called Mistick and Pockutuck. It was assigned to Connecticut by Commissioners of the United Colonies, July 26, 1647. This order being revoked, Southertown petitioned to Massachusetts, that they might be a township, which was granted October 25, 1658, and they were united with Suffolk county. They continued to sustain this relation, till Connecticut obtained a Royal Charter in 1662.

NEW YORK.

The difficulties commonly attendant on clashing opinions about the boundaries of adjoining States, were far from being unknown to New York and Massachusetts. The latter believed that they were entitled, by their charter, to extend jurisdiction, as this instrument says, even to the South Sea. The former were equally sincere in the belief that their charter excluded New England from an approach even near to the Hudson. With such diverse views, no wonder that counteraction took place between these two colonies. Massachusetts, having, in 1659, granted a trading establishment to be located two thirds of the way from Springfield, towards Awrania or Albany, ordered, the year ensuing, that their south line should be computed and continued to 40 miles on the south-west of Hudson river. During the year first named, the Dutch governor denied that Massachusetts had any right on the same river near Awrania. Still, Massachusetts, as a further expression of their claims, granted, in 1672, ten miles square on the Hudson river for a trading plantation to John Paine and others. Joseph Dwight wrote to Massachusetts Legislature, March 25, 1753, that the settlers west of Stockbridge and Sheffield, while looking to them for protection, were much annoyed by Dutch patentees, who claimed their farms; and that it would be well to annex such settlers to Hampshire county, and that Albany county, in New York, extend no farther than twelve miles from Hudson river. The report of a Committee, on the contents of Mr. Dwight's letter, proposed "that all lands not belonging to any particular county," that is, reaching to within twelve miles of the Hudson, "and lying to the westward of Connecticut river, and from said river to the utmost western bounds of the province, be annexed to the county of Hampshire, and that a bill be brought in accordingly." This was confirmed by the several branches of government. An order was passed by our General Court, June 19, 1753, to sell lands west of Sheffield and Stockbridge. It provided, that persons, who had made improvements of such territory without leave of the province, should have the first offer of the places they occupied. Commissioners were appointed, January 11, 1754, to give quit claims for these lands and others further north. With the premises of misunderstanding so laid, there were several proposals for an adjustment, which proved ineffectual. At length, border feuds arose in consequence of lands' being occupied by settlers from Massachusetts. By 1757, several violent assaults were made by the immediate parties, which resulted in the loss of property and a number of lives. In 1767, Massachusetts instructed their Commissioners to argue for the extension of their limits to within twelve miles of the Hudson, but, if unsuccessful, to comply with orders, sent over by the Lords of Trade and Plantations, and so let New York have their east boundary twenty miles this side of the same river. The last of these proposals was agreed on by both Governments in 1773, and subsequently revised and mainly confirmed in 1786. By this compromise, Massachusetts relinquished her claim to Livingston, Noblestown now Hillsdale, purchased by its settlers of this province in 1755, Canaan bought of Indians 1758, and then its proprietors applied to our Legislature to confirm such a purchase, and Stephenstown, with other territory. In the same year of 1786, December 16, Massachusetts settled their controversy with New York about their limits west of Hudson river. They were allowed by New York the preëmptive right to about five millions of acres now within the latter State, and sold to Nathaniel Gorham and Oliver Phelps, April 1, 1788, besides what they had previously ceded to the United States.

Opinion of Massachusetts as to their Lost Territory, etc.

The manner in which Massachusetts believed themselves to have been pressed on all sides, with regard to their territory, is expressed in the subsequent resolve of November 27, 1779. "Resolved, that this State has a clear and indubitable right to all lands comprehended within a line on the north, extending from the Atlantic Ocean three miles north of the river Merrimack, and every part thereof; west to the South Sea and the limits and bounds established by Charter on the south and west, notwithstanding any settlement by the King and Council of Britain 1739, fraudulently obtained and unjustly made, abridging said limits with respect to this State, and adjudging part of the territory therein contained to the State of New Hampshire. And also that this State hath a clear right to all lands, contained within the established and known limits of the old colony of Plymouth and province of Maine. Resolved that a committee be appointed by the Court immediately to prepare and report the claim of this State to all lands and rights of jurisdiction to which they are entitled by charter, although now claimed by the State of New York or New Hampshire. And also Resolved, that the President of the Council be and hereby is directed to sign the letter, directed to the President of the Congress and to Thomas Chittenden, Esq., in the name and behalf of the General Assembly, and cause them to be forwarded immediately." The letter here referred to, was written on the same day of the preceding resolves. An extract from it reads as follows:

"They have ever been dissatisfied with a decision of the King of Great Britain in the year 1739, upon a controversy which had subsisted between the provinces of New Hampshire and the Massachusetts Bay, respecting the said claim; conceiving that decision to have been grounded upon misrepresentation and injustice. But it was not thought expedient or safe for them to move for a revision of this matter, while the British administration evidently discovered a determination and did actually attempt to abridge the people of Massachusetts not only of their territorial rights and jurisdiction, but the most valuable liberties of British subjects. This was notoriously the case for many years before the breaking out of hostilities in 1775."

But, notwithstanding this strong appeal, so critical was the situation of the whole country in their war with England, and so great the peril of disunion by interference with questions between individual States, the General Government appear to have declined compliance with the wish of Massachusetts respecting their boundaries as already defined.

With regard to the preceding complaint of our legislative authorities, it was undoubtedly true. In a few years after the settlement of this Commonwealth, the Crown party in England procured the nullification of their charter, and the designation of rulers over them, whose views agreed with their own, because the institutions of our fathers tended to promote the spirit and practice of freedom. Naught but the interposing hand of Providence in the civil commotions of the mother country, then saved our ancestors from the bitter portion thus intended for them, nor did such opposition cease so long as they were under the British sceptre. The advocates for regal prerogative, looking on Massachusetts as antagonists to their policy in church and state, gave an open ear to the reiterated charges that they were too strong, and disposed to oppress their weaker neighbors. Hence, surrounded by such influences, so unfavorable to an impartial view, with little else to counteract them, whenever the King and his Council sat in judgment on the territorial questions of New England, they were inclined to decide against this Commonwealth, and in favor of their opponents. Even at this late day, and on our own shores, there remains a spice of similar but unmerited complaint. When the Colonial or Provincial jurisdiction of Massachusetts over various places which entreated to come under them, and which would have suffered severely had their petitions been rejected—is spoken of—an appeal is occasionally made to the levelling passions, that the old Bay State, for such costly kindness, were too much inclined to crowd upon smaller communities. In this there is not only misrepresentation, but, also, if uttered by residents of the settlements so defended, in view of the real facts—an ungrateful wrong.

Mode of computing the Incorporation of Towns.

Some towns, which began under the first charter, have long been accounted as incorporated from the date of their settlement, as Plymouth; others, from the date when they received their English names from General Court, as Ipswich; others from the time of their being called towns or districts, as Topsfield. Towns, commencing under the second charter and State Constitution, have had their incorporation calculated from the time when it was finally enacted, that each of them, instead of having the privileges of a village or precinct or district or plantation or township, should enjoy those of a town.

Townships for Military Services.

Among the grants of townships by Massachusetts, those of the Narraganset and Canada classes were accompanied with interesting associations. Concerning the former, several facts may be worth recital. On July 1, 1727, Samuel Chandler and Jacob Wright and many others, soldiers or lawful representatives of such as were in the Narraganset Expedition of 1675, petitioned for land. They represented, that, in 1686, two townships were granted them in the Nipmug County, which were not settled. They desired that a like grant might be renewed, which was done the following year, though not in the same location.—Thomas Hunt and others petitioned General Court, February 17, 1731, that, as the preceding grant was insufficient for all the Narraganset claimants, they may have some additional townships. The Legislature ordered that one township should be allowed for every 120 of such individuals. The house sent a message to the Council, January 19, 1732, on this subject. It was as follows. "Proclamation was made to them, when mustered on Dedham Plain, whence they began their march,* that if they played the man, took the fort, and drove the enemy out of the Narraganset country, which was their great seat, they should have a gratuity in land besides their wages." Such a victory was achieved. "And as the condition has been performed, certainly the promise, in all equity and justice, ought to be fulfilled. And if we consider the difficulties these brave men went through in storming the fort in the depth of winter, and the pinching wants they afterwards underwent in pursuing the Indians that escaped, through a hideous wilderness, famously known throughout New England to this day, by the name of the hungry march, and if we further consider, that, until this brave though small army thus played the man, the whole country was filled with distress and fear, and we trembled in this capital, Boston itself, and that to the goodness of God to this army, we owe our fathers' and our own safety and estates,"—they ought to have their claim.

The list of Narraganset claimants, April 26, 1733, were 840, who had five townships allowed them, besides two previously assigned to them. As much difficulty arose from the claims made by different heirs of the same deceased soldier, General Court adopted the ensuing rule. "The eldest male heir, if such there might be, otherwise the eldest female, if they pleased, should hold the land by paying to the other descendants or heirs such proportionable parts of ten pounds (which was judged to be the value of a right or single share) as such descendants would be entitled to, provided the said land had descended according to a law of the province for the settlement of intestate estates." After many meetings of committees, appointed by the grantees, the latter convened on Boston Common, and formed themselves into seven associations, each having the specified number of 120 for a single township. Every association chose three agents, all of whom met at Luke Verdey's, the Royal Exchange in King street, Boston,

* Rev. Peter Hobart's Diary gives the date of this marching from Dedham, Dec. 9, 1675.

Oct. 17, 1733, and assigned the respective townships. These were located in what subsequently fell to New Hampshire, in Massachusetts and Maine.

Respecting Canada townships. These began to be applied for by soldiers in the Canada Expedition of 1690, or their descendants, in 1735. In a few years there were nine Plantations laid out for such persons, on the frontiers of the province as it then was. A few others of this class were afterwards granted. Besides the Narraganset and Canada townships, several others were allowed for military service. According to a general rule of our Legislature in making such grants, it was required that each of these townships should reserve one lot for the first minister, another for the ministry, and a third for the schools. It was further required, that every township, consisting of six miles square, should have, at least, sixty families, and a learned orthodox minister within seven years.

Regulation as to Districts.

Hutchinson states, that in 1757, "by the King's instructions to the Governor, he is strictly charged to consent to no act for making a new town, unless by a clause in it, there should be a restraint of this power of sending Representatives; and Danvers, a few years before, when it had been separated from Salem, was made a district and not a town, because districts had not this power." Such a veto appears to have been interposed by His Majesty, to prevent the increase of opposition to his power in the popular branch of the Legislature, filled with Representatives from the towns which were generally against his policy.

In an act for the regulation of towns, March 23, 1786, is the following section, "And be it further enacted, That all places incorporated by the name of Districts before the first day of January, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven, are hereby declared to be towns, to every intent and purpose whatever, and places incorporated by the name of Districts since the same first day of January, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven, or such places as may hereafter be incorporated by the name of District, are and shall hereafter be entitled to all the privileges, and vested with all the powers in this Act expressed, as amply to every intent and purpose as they could have been if expressly named herein." Not aware of this clause, persons have repeatedly asked, when were such and such places incorporated as towns, because there are only regular charters for them as districts, and none for them as towns.

The subsequent marks of abbreviation, etc., preceding the account of towns under the head of New Hampshire, are repeated here with the signs of change and uncertainty, as applicable to the following tables. These marks prefixed to dates after towns, signify * granted, † plat accepted, ‡ settled, + change of original name, × uncertain as to the day of the month. The absence of any sign denotes the real date of incorporation, except otherwise stated under Remarks. When d is subjoined to certain towns, it signifies that they were incorporated as districts at the dates suffixed to them. The Indian names of towns are printed in italics, and their former English names in Roman letters. The new style is used in relation to years only.

GOVERNORS OF MASSACHUSETTS.

In our first volume we gave a complete list of the Governors of Massachusetts, from 1620 to 1847, with a brief sketch of Governor Carver. In the second volume we gave sketches of the governors under the first charter. We propose to continue in this, and in future volumes, brief sketches of each, in chronological order. We give, also, fac-similes of their autographs, faithfully taken by N. B. Shurtleff, M. D., from original documents. We are chiefly indebted, for the following notices, to the "American Biographical and Historical Dictionary," by William Allen, A. M.

A large, elegant cursive signature of Joseph Dudley, written in dark ink. The signature is highly stylized, with long, sweeping loops and a prominent 'J' at the beginning.

JOSEPH DUDLEY, governor of Massachusetts, was the son of Gov. Thomas Dudley, and was born September 23, 1647. In his childhood, after his father's death, he was under the care of the Rev. Mr. Allen of Dedham, who married his mother. He was graduated at Harvard college in 1665. He afterwards entered into the service of his country in the Indian war of 1675. In 1682 he went to England as an agent for the province. When the government was changed in 1686 he was appointed president of Massachusetts and New Hampshire. His commission was received in May 1686. His authority was of short continuance, for Andros arrived at the close of the same year. He, however, was continued in the council, and was appointed chief justice. In 1689 he went again to England, and in 1690 returned with a commission of chief justice of New York, and continued in this country three years. He was then eight years lieutenant-governor of the Isle of Wight. He was appointed governor of Massachusetts by Queen Ann, and arriving at Boston June 11, 1702, he continued in the government till November 1715. He died at Roxbury, April 2, 1720, in the seventy-third year of his age. He possessed rare endowments, and was a singular honor to his country, being a man of learning and an accomplished gentleman. He was a scholar, a divine, a philosopher, and a lawyer. As governor of Massachusetts, he was instructed to procure an act rendering his salary and that of the lieutenant-governor permanent. These instructions occasioned a controversy with the legislature, which lasted during the administration of Shute and others of his successors. He loved much ceremony in the government, and but little in the church, being attached to the congregational order. He was a sincere Christian, whose virtues attracted general esteem, though in the conflict of political parties his character was frequently assailed. While in his family he devoutly addressed himself to the Supreme Being; he also frequently prayed with his children separately, for their everlasting welfare, and did not think it humbling to impart religious instruction to his servants. He was economical and dignified, and he applied himself with great diligence to the duties of his station.*

SIR EDMUND ANDROS, governor of New England, had some command in New York in 1672, and in 1674 was appointed governor of that province. He continued in this office till 1682, exhibiting in this government but little of that tyrannical disposition which he afterwards displayed. He arrived at Boston Dec. 20, 1686, with a commission from King James for the government of New England. He made high professions of regard to the public good, directed the judges to administer justice according to the custom of the place, ordered the established rules with respect to rates and taxes to be observed, and declared that all the colony laws, not inconsistent with his commission, should remain in full force. By these professions he calmed the apprehensions which had agitated the minds of many; but it was not long before the monster stood forth in his proper shape.

His administration was most oppressive and tyrannical. The press was restrained, exorbitant taxes were levied, and the congregational ministers were threatened to be deprived of their support for nonconformity. Sir Edmund, knowing that his royal master was making great progress towards despotism in England, was very willing to keep equal pace in his less important government. It was pretended that all titles to land were destroyed; and the farmers were obliged to take new patents, for which they paid large fees. He prohibited marriage, except the parties entered into bonds with sureties to be forfeited in case there should afterwards appear to have been any lawful impediment. There was at this time but one episcopal clergyman in the country; but Sir Edmund indulged the hope of receiving a supply, and he wrote to the bishop of London, intimating, for the encouragement of those who might be persuaded to come to this country, that in future no marriage should be deemed lawful, unless celebrated by ministers of the church of England. With four or five of his council he laid what taxes he thought proper. The fees of office were raised to a most exorbitant height.

The whole of his proceedings were such as to show that he was perfectly disposed to follow all the capricious and arbitrary measures of his weak and bigoted master, King James II. At length the spirit of the people could no longer brook submission. Having sought in the wilds of America the secure enjoyment of that civil and religious liberty, of which they had been unjustly deprived in England, they were not disposed to see their dearest rights wrested from them without a struggle to retain them. Animated with the love of liberty, they were also resolute and courageous in its defence. They had for several years suffered the impositions of a tyrannical administration, and the dissatisfaction and indignation which had been gathering during this period, were blown into a flame by the report of an intended massacre by the governor's guards. On the morning of the 18th of April, 1689, the inhabitants of Boston took up arms, the people poured in from the country, and the governor, with such of the council as had been most active, and other objectionable persons, about fifty in number, were seized and confined. The old magistrates were restored, and the next month the joyful news of the revolution in England reached this country, and quieted all apprehension of the consequences of what had been done. After having been kept at the castle till February following, Sir Edmund was sent to England for trial. The general court about the same time despatched a committee of several gentlemen to substantiate the charges against him.

The government was reduced to a most perplexing dilemma. If they condemned Sir Edmund's administration, the sentence might be drawn into a precedent, and they might seem to encourage insurrection and rebellion at future periods, when circumstances did not render so desperate an expedient necessary. On the other hand, if they should approve of the administration of Andros and censure the proceedings of the colonists, it would imply a reprobation of the very measure which had been pursued in bringing about the revolution in England. It was therefore considered prudent to dismiss the business without coming to a final decision. The people were accordingly left in the full enjoyment of their freedom; and Sir Edmund, in public estimation guilty, escaped without censure.

In 1692 he was appointed governor of Virginia, as successor to Lord Effingham. This event was very surprising, and it was accounted for only on the supposition that the English ministry was composed of Tories. He is not however represented as a bad governor of Virginia. He died in London, Feb. 1714, at a very advanced age.*

William Phips

SIR WILLIAM PHIPS, governor of Massachusetts, was born at a small settlement on the river Kennebeck, February 2, 1651. His father was a gunsmith, in humble circumstances, and his mother had twenty-six children, of whom twenty-one were sons. After living in the wilderness till he was eighteen years of age, he bound himself as an apprentice to a ship carpenter for four years, at the expiration of which time he went to Boston, where he learned to read and write. Determining to seek his fortune upon the sea, after a variety of adventures he discovered a Spanish wreck on the coast of Hispaniola, and fished up plate, and pearls, and jewels, amounting in value to three hundred thousand pounds sterling, with which he sailed to England in 1687. Such was his honesty, and so liberal was he to his seamen, that his own share amounted only to sixteen thousand pounds. He was at this time made a knight by King James. Returning to Boston, he was in 1690 admitted a member of the North Church, being baptized and professing repentance of his sins. In the same year he commanded an expedition against Port Royal, which place he captured. When the new charter of Massachusetts was obtained, he was nominated by Dr. Mather as the governor. In this capacity he arrived at Boston, May 14, 1693. He soon put a stop to prosecutions for witchcraft. In August he sailed with about four hundred and fifty men to Pemaquid, where he built a fort. In 1694, in a dispute with the collector of the port, Sir William was so far carried away by the passion of the moment as to have recourse to blows to settle the controversy. He was soon afterwards removed, and he sailed in November for England, where he received assurances of being restored; but being seized by a malignant fever, he died Feb. 18, 1695, aged forty-four years. Lieutenant governor Stoughton possessed the chief authority in Massachusetts till the appointment of the Earl of Bellamont. Sir William, though his origin was very humble, was not elated by the great change which took place in his circumstances. He was a man of uncommon enterprise and industry, of an excellent disposition, though he did not always retain the command of himself, and of perfect honesty and integrity. He exerted himself to promote the interests of New England.*

Bellamont

RICHARD, Earl of Bellamont, governor of New York, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire, was appointed to these offices early in May 1695, * Magnalia, ii. 37—75; Neal's N. E. ii. 50, 57, 108, 173; Adams' N. E. 166; Hutchinson, i. 396—416; ii. 75—84; Holmes' Annals, i. 478; ii. 3, 21, 27.

but did not arrive at New York until May 1698. He had to struggle with many difficulties, for the people were divided, the treasury was unsupplied, and the fortifications were out of repair.

The Earl of Bellamont remained in the province of New York about a year. He arrived at Boston May 26, 1699, and in Massachusetts he was received with the greatest respect, as it was a new thing to see a nobleman at the head of the government. He, in return, took every method to ingratiate himself with the people. He was condescending, affable, and courteous upon all occasions. Though a churchman, he attended the weekly lecture in Boston with the general court, who always adjourned for the purpose. For the preachers he professed the greatest regard. By his wise conduct he obtained a larger sum as a salary and as a gratuity, than any of his predecessors or successors. Though he remained but fourteen months, the grants made him were one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five pounds sterling. His time was much taken up in securing the pirates and their effects, to accomplish which was a principal reason of his appointment. During his administration captain Kidd was seized, and sent to England for trial. Soon after the session of the general court in May 1700, he returned to New York, where he died, March 5, 1701.

The Earl of Bellamont had made himself very popular in his governments. He was a nobleman of polite manners, a friend to the revolution, which excited so much joy in New England, and a favorite of King William.

Hutchinson seems to consider his regard for religion as pretended, and represents him as preferring for his associates in private the less precise part of the country. As the earl was once going from the lecture to his house with a great crowd around him, he passed by one Bullivant, an apothecary, and a man of the liberal cast, who was standing by his shop door, loitering. "Doctor," said the earl, with an audible voice, "you have lost a precious sermon to-day." Bullivant whispered to one of his companions, who stood by him, "if I could have got as much by being there as his lordship will, I would have been there too." *

SAMUEL SHUTE, governor of Massachusetts, was the son of an eminent citizen of London. His mother was the daughter of the Rev. Mr. Caryl, a dissenting minister of distinction. His early education was under the care of Mr. Charles Morton. From London he was sent to Leyden, and afterwards he entered the army of King William, served under Marlborough, and became a lieutenant colonel. He was wounded in one of the principal battles in Flanders. Arriving at Boston as governor, October 4, 1716, in the place of Dudley, he continued in office a little more than six years. He embarked January 1, 1723, on his return to England, with complaints against the province. Governor Burnet succeeded him. During his administration he maintained a warm controversy with the house of representatives. He endeavored in vain to procure a fixed salary, an object which Dudley had sought without effect. His right of negating the speaker was denied, and his powers as commander-in-chief were assumed by the house. In consequence of his complaints an explanatory charter was procured in 1724, which confirmed the governor in the rights for which he had contended. He died in England, April 15, 1742, aged eighty years.*

WILLIAM BURNET, governor of several of the American colonies, was the eldest son of the celebrated Bishop Burnet, and was born at the Hague, in March, 1688. He was named William, after the Prince of Orange, who stood his godfather. Previously to his coming to this country, he possessed a considerable fortune; but it had been wrecked in the South Sea scheme, which reduced many opulent families to indigence. In the year 1720 he was appointed governor of New York and New Jersey in the place of Robert Hunter, Esq., who succeeded Mr. Burnet as comptroller-general of the accounts of the customs, a place worth twelve hundred pounds per annum. He arrived at New York and took upon him the government of that province, September 17, 1720. He continued in this station till his removal in 1728. None of his predecessors had such extensive and just views of the Indian affairs, and of the dangerous neighborhood of the French, whose advances he was fully determined to check. He penetrated into their policy, being convinced, from their possessing the main passes, from their care to conciliate the natives, and from the increase of their settlements in Louisiana, that the British colonies had much to fear from their arts and power.

In his first speech to the assembly he expressed his apprehensions and endeavored to awaken the suspicion of the members. Agreeably to his desire an act was passed at the first session, prohibiting the sale of such goods to the French as were suitable for the Indian trade. This was a wise and necessary measure; for by means of goods, produced from Albany and transported to Canada by the Mohawk and lake Ontario, the French were enabled to divert the fur trade from the Hudson to the St Lawrence, and to seduce the fidelity of the Indian allies. But wise and necessary as this measure was, a clamor was raised against it by those whose interests were affected. The governor however was not prevented from pursuing his plans for the public welfare. He perceived the importance of obtaining the command of lake Ontario in order to frustrate the project of the French for establishing a chain of forts from Canada to Louisiana, so as to confine the English colonies to narrow limits along the sea coast. For this purpose he began the erection of a trading house at Oswego, in the country of the Seneca Indians, in 1722. In this year there was a congress at Albany of the several governors and commissioners on the renewal of the ancient friendship with the Indians; and governor Burnet persuaded them to send a message to the eastern Indians, threatening them with war, unless they concluded a peace with the English, who had been much harassed by their frequent irruptions.

Another circumstance, in addition to the act above mentioned, increased the disaffection of the people to the governor. As he sustained the office of chancellor, he paid great attention to its duties.

Though he was not a lawyer, he in general transacted the business which was brought before him, with correctness and ability. He had, however, one failing, which disqualified him for a station which sometimes required a patient application of mind. His decisions were precipitate. He used to say of himself, "I act first, and think afterward."

As some cases were brought before him, in which the path of justice was not so plain as to be instantly seen, and as the establishment of the court itself without the consent of the assembly was considered as a grievance, Mr. Burnet saw a strong party rise against him. His services were overlooked, and his removal became necessary. Such was his disinterested zeal in prosecuting his plan of opposition to the French, that after they had built a large storehouse and repaired the fort at Niagara in 1726, he, in the following year, at his own expense, built a fort at Oswego for the protection of the post and trade. This was a measure of the highest importance to the colonies.

In the government of New Jersey, which he enjoyed at the same time with that of New York, no events of magnitude or interest took place. In the session of the assembly, in the year 1721, a bill was introduced, which was supposed to have originated with the governor, entitled, "an act against denying the divinity of our Saviour Jesus Christ, the doctrine of the blessed Trinity, the truth of the holy scripture, and spreading atheistical books;" but it was rejected.

Mr. Burnet was succeeded in his governments by John Montgomerie, Esq., to whom he delivered the great seal of the province of New York, April 15, 1728. He left New York with reluctance, for by his marriage with the daughter of Mr. Vanhorne he had become connected with a numerous family, and he had formed a strict intimacy and friendship with several gentlemen of learning and worth.

Being appointed governor of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, he reached Boston July 13, 1728, and was received with unusual pomp. In his speech to the assembly, July 24, he made known his instructions to insist upon a fixed salary, and expressed his intention firmly to adhere to them. Thus the controversy, which had been agitated during the administration of his predecessor Shute, was revived. On the one hand it was contended, that if the support of the governor depended upon an annual grant, he would be laid under constraint, and would not act with the necessary independence and regard to the rights of the king. On the other hand, it was asserted that the charter gave the assembly a full right to raise and appropriate all monies for the support of government, and that an honorable support would always be afforded to a worthy chief magistrate, without rendering him completely independent of the people, whose interests he is bound to promote. The governor pursued the controversy with spirit, but without success; and the opposition had an evident effect upon his spirits. A violent cold, occasioned by the oversetting of his carriage upon the causeway at Cambridge, when the tide was high, was followed by a fever, which terminated his life September 7, 1729. He was succeeded by Mr. Belcher.

Governor Burnet was a man of superior talents, and in many respects of an amiable character. His acquaintance with books, and his free and easy manner of communicating his sentiments, made him the delight of men of letters. His library was one of the richest private collections in America.

Being invited to dine with an aged gentleman, who had been a senator under the old charter, and who retained the custom of saying grace sitting, he was asked, whether it would be more agreeable to his excellency, that grace should be said sitting or standing. The governor replied, "standing or sitting, any way or no way, just as you please." Another anecdote is the following. One of the committee, who went from Boston to meet him on the borders of Rhode Island, was the facetious Colonel Tailer. Burnet complained of the long graces, which were said by clergymen on the road, and asked when they would shorten. Tailer answered, "the graces will increase in length till you come to Boston; after that they will shorten till you come to your government of New Hampshire, where your excellency will find no grace at all."

The governor, though the son of a bishop, was not remarkable for his exact attendance upon public worship. Mr. Hutchinson, one of his successors, who had a keener sense of what was discreet, if not of what was right, thinks that he should have conformed more to the customs and prejudices of New England. But he had no talent at dissimulation, and his character presented itself fully to view. He did not appear better than he really was. He sometimes wore a cloth coat, lined with velvet; it was said to be expressive of his character. By a clause in his last will, he ordered his body to be buried in the nearest church yard or burying ground, as he had no attachment to particular modes and forms.

He published some astronomical observations in the Transactions of the Royal Society, and an essay on scripture prophecy, wherein it is endeavored to explain the three periods contained in the twelfth chapter of Daniel, with arguments to prove that the first period expired in 1715.*

Admission to the College.

It is very desirable and important, that the candidates should be well and correctly prepared, particularly in grammatical and elementary knowledge. If they have more time than is requisite for this purpose, instructors are desired, and advised, for obvious reasons, not to anticipate the College studies, but rather to extend their studies to other authors.

* The instruction in Italian is given at present by the Smith Professor.

The examination for the Freshman Class occupies two days, and takes place on the Friday and Saturday (the 20th and 21st of July, 1849) of Commencement week, beginning precisely at 6 o'clock, A.M., on Friday Morning. Attendance on both days is required.

No person will be examined for admission to the College at any other time than the commencement of a term, except in extraordinary cases.

Every person, before examination, must produce proper testimonials of a good moral character, and, after being accepted on examination, must give a bond, with sureties, of which one at least must belong to this Commonwealth, to the satisfaction of the Steward of the College, in the sum of four hundred dollars, to pay all charges accruing under the laws and customs of the University. A certificate that such bond has been given must be exhibited to the President, before any person can be admitted to the privileges of the institution.

The Academical year is divided into two Terms and two Vacations:

The first term commences on the Friday next succeeding Commencement (25th of August, 1848,) and continues twenty weeks.

The first Vacation commences at the end of the first Term (January 12th, 1849,) and continues till Wednesday, 28th February.

The Second Term commences at the end of the first Vacation (February 28th, 1849,) and continues twenty weeks.

The second vacation commences at the end of the second Term, (July 18th,) and continues six weeks.

The public Exhibitions are on the third Tuesday (17th) of October, the first Tuesday (1st) of May.

The Dudleian Lecture is on the second Wednesday (9th) of May.

Commencement is on the third Wednesday (18th) of July, 1849.

The bills containing college charges are to be made out at the end of each term; and must be settled within a week from the commencement of the succeeding term.

N. B. In the revised code of "Statutes and Laws," enacted by the Corporation and overseers during the past Academic year, it is provided that Commencement shall henceforward be on the third Wednesday of July, instead of the fourth Wednesday of August; the Summer Vacation of six weeks to follow Commencement.

Expenses.

The necessary expenses of an undergraduate for a year, included in the college bills, are as follows:—

Instruction, Library, Lecture-rooms,	$75 00
Rent and care of Room,	15 00
Board for forty weeks, at $2.50 per week,	100 00
Or Board for 40 weeks at $2.00 per week,	80 00
Text-books (average),	12 00
Special Repairs, &c.,	from 1 to 2 00

$184 00 or $204 00

Other expenses must vary with the economy of each student. Wood and coal ready for use are delivered at the students' rooms, by the lessee of the College wharf, at the market price, usually at $ 6.50 per cord for wood, and $ 7 per ton for coal. The rent of rooms in private houses, from $ 30 to $ 60 per annum. Board in the town, from $ 2.50 to $ 3.50. The students find their own beds and furniture.

DIVINITY SCHOOL.

Faculty of Theology.—Hon. Edward Everett, LL.D., President. Rev. Convers Francis, D.D., Rev. George R. Noyes, D.D.

Candidates for admission are expected to present themselves on the Friday after Commencement. If unknown to the Faculty, they are to produce testimonials to their moral and serious character.

Candidates for admission to an advanced standing must have been engaged in the study of Theology as long as the class into which they propose to be received, and must pass an examination in the studies which that class has pursued.

Students are required to reside in or near Divinity Hall. They give bonds in the sum of $ 100 for the payment of term-bills, which, including charges for instruction, rent and care of room and furniture, and use of class-books, amount to $ 66 annually. Board may be had in the College Commons for $ 2.00 or $ 2.50 a week. Each student must possess a copy of the Old and New Testament Scriptures, in the original languages, the latter in Griesbach's edition. A copy of all other class-books is furnished on loan. Indigent students are aided from foundations and other sources. Three years, including the vacations, which amount to twelve weeks in each year, complete the term of residence.

Students are entitled to receive instruction from the Instructor in the German Language, and to be present at all public lectures given in the University.

It is considered of great importance that those who enter the School should be present at the beginning of the first term.

LAW SCHOOL.

Faculty of Law.—Hon. Edward Everett, LL.D., President. Joel Parker, LL.D., Hon. Theophilus Parsons, A.M.

The design of this Institution is to afford a complete course of legal education for gentlemen intended for the Bar in any of the United States, and also a systematic course of studies in commercial jurisprudence for those who intend to devote themselves exclusively to mercantile pursuits.

No examination, and no particular course of previous study, are necessary for admission; but the student must produce testimonials of good moral character.

Students may enter the School in any stage of their professional studies, or mercantile pursuits. But they are advised, with a view to their own advantage and improvement, to enter at the beginning of those studies, rather than at a later period. They may also elect what particular studies they will pursue.

The fees are $50 a term, and $25 for half or any lesser fraction of a term; for which sum, without any additional charge, students have the use of the lecture-rooms, the Law and College Libraries, and the text-books; and they are admitted free to all the public lectures in the College. The other expenses for a term are as follows:—

Board, 20 weeks, from $2.00 to $3.50 per week, from $40	to $70
Room-rent, including care of room, but not making fires, 26	to 52
Furniture (if the student does not furnish his own), 10	to 20

MEDICAL SCHOOL.

The Medical Lectures form a department of instruction in Harvard University. They begin annually, at the new Medical College, in North Grove Street, Boston, on the first Wednesday in November, at 12 o'clock, noon.

The following are the courses of Lectures delivered in this College.

Obstetrics and Medical Jurisprudence ,	Walter Channing, M.D.
Materia Medica and Clinical Medicine ,	J. Bigelow, M.D.
Surgery ,	George Hayward, M.D.
Theory and Practice of Physic ,	John Ware, M.D.
Chemistry ,	John W. Webster, M.D.
Anatomy and Physiology ,	Oliver W. Holmes, M.D.
Pathological Anatomy ,	John B. S. Jackson, M.D.

The fee for the whole course is $80.*

The fee for graduation is $20; which is deposited with the Dean when application is made to him for examination.

The fee for matriculation is $3. This fee is appropriated to the increase of the Library, and is to be paid to the Dean by all persons who propose to attend any of the courses.

The Hospital and Library are gratuitous. Tickets for the Dissecting Room, $5. No exertions are spared to obtain a supply of subjects according to the existing laws, and to furnish to the class the means of pursuing the important branch of practical anatomy. Board is as low as in any of our cities.

The Clinical Lectures in Medicine and Surgery are given to the class on cases in the Massachusetts General Hospital, three times a week. Surgical operations at the Hospital are frequent. An abundant opportunity is thus furnished to students for most important practical observation and study.

* Fees for the tickets are required to be paid when the tickets are taken out, and no person can be admitted to a lecture who does not exhibit his ticket for the same when called for.

LAWRENCE SCIENTIFIC SCHOOL.

Faculty.—Hon. Edward Everett, LL.D. President. William Cranch Bond, A.M., John W. Webster, M.D., Louis Agassiz, P.D., Benjamin Peirce, LL.D., Asa Gray, M.D., Joseph Lovering, A.M., Jeffries Wyman, M.D., Eben. N. Horsford, A.M., George Phillips Bond, A.B.

The following courses of instruction will be given in the Scientific School at Cambridge, during the current academic year (1848-9), which commenced on Monday, 28th of August last.

The instruction will be given in lectures, recitations, or both, according to the nature of the study, and at the discretion of the instructor.

Candidates for admission must have attained the age of eighteen years, must have received a good common English education, and must be qualified to pursue to advantage the courses of study to which they propose to give their attention. They must furnish satisfactory evidence of good moral character, and give bonds, in the sum of $ 200, with a surety resident in Massachusetts, for the payment of all dues to the School.

Members of the School, on leaving it, will receive a certificate of the number of terms for which they have been attached to it, and of the studies pursued by them.

The number and choice of studies to be pursued are optional on the part of the students, who will, however, be counselled on these points by the Faculty. Attendance on the lectures and recitations is voluntary. For this as well as other reasons, the government of the University wish wholly to discourage the resort of young men to the Scientific School, who do not, in the opinion of their parents and guardians, possess that stability of character and firmness of purpose, which will insure a faithful performance of duty, without academic discipline.

I. Chemistry.

Professor Horsford will continue to receive special students to the course of experimental instruction in Chemistry, who will give their attendance in the Laboratory from 9 o'clock, A. M., till 5 o'clock, P. M.

The course will be modified to meet the wants of those designing to pursue practical analysis, manufacturing, metallurgy, medicine, engineering, agriculture, or instruction, and proportioned in duration to the objects and previous acquisitions of the student.

A course of theoretical and experimental lectures upon Inorganic Chemistry in the first term, and upon Organic Chemistry in the second term, will be given by Professor Horsford.

Excursions will be made in term-time to manufacturing establishments in the neighborhood, where the practical application of Chemistry to the arts may be witnessed.

II. Zoölogy and Geology.

A course of lectures will be delivered by Professor Agassiz on Zoology, embracing the fundamental principles of the classification of animals, as founded upon structure and embryonic development, and illustrating their natural affinities, habits, geographical distribution, and the relations which exist between the living and extinct races.

Besides the instructions of the lecture-room, Professor Agassiz will afford to the students access to his laboratory during certain hours, in order to show them how to observe isolated facts, how to determine living and fossil animals, and how to conduct the investigation of a regular series of combined phenomena.

For those who intend to make a further study in these sciences, excursions in the neighborhood will be made in term-time, and longer excursions in vacation, to those parts of the country, near or remote, which offer the most instructive field of observation.

III. Engineering.

It has not yet been in the power of the Corporation to fill this department. It will be brought into operation as soon as possible.

Should a sufficient number of students require it, the following special courses will be given :—

Botany.

A course of lectures twice a week, at the Botanic Garden, by Professor Gray, on Physiological and Structural Botany and Vegetable Anatomy, with microscopical demonstrations.

Experimental Philosophy.

A course of lectures by Professor Lovering, with instruction in the use of Philosophical Instruments.

Anatomy and Physiology.

Dr. Wyman will commence, on Monday, September 28, a course of lectures on the following subjects :—

1. On the use of the microscope and its application to the study of the different animal tissues, including the phenomena of cell-growth.
2. On the more important physical phenomena manifested in animals.

The use of the microscope will be taught practically, and the different subjects treated of in the lectures will be experimentally illustrated.

Astronomy.

Practical Astronomy and the use of Astronomical Instruments will be taught at the Observatory, by William C. Bond, Esq., Director, and Mr. George P. Bond, Assistant Observer.

The Observatory is supplied with the apparatus for simultaneous magnetic observations, which will be intrusted to a class of students desirous of taking charge of it.

Mathematics.

Instruction will be given in the Higher Mathematics, and especially in Analytical and Celestial Mechanics, by Professor Peirce.

Private instruction in the various branches of Mathematics will be given to those desirous of receiving it, by competent instructors residing at the University.

The following courses of lectures delivered to undergraduates will be open to members of the Scientific School, viz:—

A compendious course on Mineralogy and Geology, by Professor Webster.

A course on Systematic Botany according to the Natural System, by Professor Gray.

On Experimental Philosophy, by Professor Lovering. The subjects for the first term of 1848-9 will be Electricity, Magnetism, &c.

A course on the General Outlines of the Classification of the Animal Kingdom, and on Comparative Anatomy and Physiology, by Professor Jeffries Wyman.

The new Chemical Laboratory and the building for the department of Engineering, are in progress of erection. The former will be ready for occupation by September next.

The formation of a Museum of Natural History, on an extensive scale, has been commenced, under the superintendence of the professors in the several departments.

The Mineralogical Cabinet of the University, the Rumford and Philosophical Apparatus, the Anatomical Museum, the Botanic Garden, the Observatory, and the Public Library, will be accessible to the students of the Scientific School.

Fees.

In the department of Chemistry the fees for special students will be, for instruction six days in the week, per term of twenty weeks.....$ 50.00

For laboratory apparatus and supplies 25.00

For three days per week, two thirds, and for one day, one third of the above sums, respectively.

The special students in Chemistry will also supply themselves at their own expense with such articles of apparatus as are consumed in using, such as flasks, corks, tubing, lamps, crucibles, &c., together with alcohol, and platinum, gold, and silver solutions.

For special students in any of the departments (except Chemistry,) who pass several hours daily under the immediate direction of the Professors in their laboratories, or upon excursions, per term of twenty weeks.....$ 50.00

This is the maximum charge, which the instructors in certain cases may diminish at their discretion.

The lectures delivered in the Scientific School, as well as those designed especially for undergraduates, may be attended by the members of the Scientific School, and also by persons not otherwise connected with the University, on payment of a fee of ten dollars per course for the lectures on Chemistry, and five dollars per course for any other lectures.

Members of the Professional Schools, Resident Graduates, and members of the Senior Class are permitted to attend any lectures delivered in the Scientific School, on the payment of a fee of five dollars per course.

For further information concerning the School, application may be made to Eben. N. Horsford, Dean of the Faculty.

Terms of Admission.

Candidates for admission to the Freshman Class are examined in Geography, Vulgar Arithmetic, and Algebra through Simple Equations; in English, Latin, and Greek Grammar; including Prosody in Virgil and Cicero's Select Orations; in Cæsar's Commentaries, or Sallust; and in the Greek Testament, and in Jacob's, Colton's, or Felton's Greek Reader.

For admission to an advanced standing, an examination must also be sustained in the studies to which the class have attended since admission.

The stated time for admission is on the day preceding Commencement; but persons may be examined in any other part of the College Terms.

Testimonials of good moral character are in all cases required, and a probation of six months before students are matriculated, during which time they are subject to all the laws and regulations of College.

Many who apply for admission are imperfectly prepared in the English studies, particularly in Arithmetic and Geography. As these studies are not pursued in College, it is necessary that the preparation in them should be full and thorough.

Vacations.

The first, from Commencement, four weeks.

The second, from the second Wednesday in December, six weeks.

The third, from the first Wednesday in May, three weeks.

Commencement is on the third Wednesday in August.

Students are required to be present the whole of the term-time, unless excused by the President. The loss of even a few days, especially at the beginning of a term, is exceedingly undesirable.

Expenses.

The amount of incidental expenses will depend very much on the habits of the student, and the liberality of his allowance. It is earnestly recommended to parents and guardians, not to authorize their sons and wards to obtain credits here, and not to pay debts contracted without their authority.

No back tuition is required; but those who enter on an advanced standing, unless they come from another college, pay the following sums, as entrance-money, namely, Sophomores, $10; Juniors, $15; Seniors, $20.

The income of the Charity Funds, amounting to about eight hundred dollars per annum, is distributed among indigent young men of merit, to aid them in the payment of their bills. This pays about two-thirds of the tuition of those who apply. Previously to examination, the candidate must exhibit satisfactory testimonials that he sustains a good moral character. If he has been a member of any other college, he will be expected to present a certificate of regular dismission.

No one can be admitted to the Freshman Class until he has completed his fourteenth year; and no one to an advanced standing without a corresponding increase of age.

2. Six weeks from the Wednesday preceding the annual State Thanksgiving.

3. Three weeks from the third Wednesday of April.

Such students as are obliged by their circumstances to teach school in winter, are allowed to be absent for the purpose.

The American Antiquarian Society, established for the purpose of collecting and preserving the materials of history, more especially American History, was incorporated by the Legislature of Massachusetts in 1812.

Isaiah Thomas, the distinguished Printer and Publisher, and author of "The History of Printing in America," was the first president, and has been the greatest benefactor of this Institution. A brick edifice for the Library and Cabinet, erected at his expense, was completed in 1820. His private collection of books, which was a considerable one, became the basis of the Library. Extensive additions were made to the building after his death, from resources provided by his will; and the principal portion of the funds of the Society, now amounting to more than $27,000, resulted from his bequests.

The Library of the Society now exceeds 16,000 volumes. Its Cabinet contains many articles of curiosity and interest; and its manuscripts, coins, &c., are of considerable value. Two volumes of Transactions, and a Catalogue of the Library, have been published; and a third volume of Transactions is in preparation for the press.

There are two meetings of the Society in the year; one at Worcester, on the 23d day of October, the day on which Columbus discovered America; the other in Boston, on the last Wednesday of May. The Council of the Society meet, on the last Wednesday of each month, at Antiquarian Hall, in Worcester.

CHURCHES AND CLERGYMEN IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Change seems to be the order of the day. Perhaps we ought to use the word progress. We have had more than two hundred and fifty alterations reported to us, to be made in our table of clergymen and churches in 1848. We are persuaded that if all had been reported, the number would exceed three hundred.

We think this a proper place to insert an extract from the interesting History of Groton, by Caleb Butler, Esq. The extract was written nearly one hundred years ago. It may serve as a useful hint to all who manifest a restless curiosity, or a business haste, while at church. Some are in the habit of looking at their watches, or church clock, when the clergyman commences his discourse, as if he were timed, as a Railroad Conductor. Others will prepare in advance, for leaving the house as soon as they hear the last amen. They will open their pew doors, take their hats, put on their coats, dress their children — as if it were a privilege to be the first out of doors. And yet, when out, most remain to exchange compliments, and exhibit no evidence that they are compelled to be at home at a particular moment. To enter the church too late is an absolute annoyance to the clergyman and to the congregation, and should be avoided if possible. To manifest haste while the clergyman is pronouncing the blessing, is to trifle with a most sacred subject, and no one will be guilty of it who has a proper self-respect.

"The following report of a committee is thought worthy of a recital," says Mr. Butler, "as it may tend to show the habits and manners of the times. Some of the rules might be observed with propriety at the present time."

"Groton, May 17, 1756. We, the subscribers, being appointed a committee to consider what regulations are proper on Lord's day, in the meeting-house, have this day attended that service and have agreed as followeth :

"1. That every person take their proper seat as soon as they come into the meeting-house.

"2. That no tobacco be used by chewing or smoking, or any trash be left in the meeting-house, either in the time of public worship or in the time of intermission.

"3. That after the blessing is pronounced, pews, and all the fore seats, above and below, move out first, and after they have quitted their seats, the second seats to follow, and so on till the whole house be emptied; and all persons quit the door as soon as they are out.

"Also: A fine be paid by each person for any defect herein mentioned; the sum of two shillings for the first default, and to add one shilling more for the second, and so on to add for every offence committed the like sum of one shilling to the first two shillings, &c.; and also the one half of the fines above be to any person or persons who shall complain of any breaches hereof, and the other half to the poor of the town; and a committee to be chosen, whose names are James Prescott, Esq., Benj. Stone, and Josiah Sawtell, to have these orders to be enacted to be a law, by the Court of General Sessions of the Peace, if needed, as soon as may be."

MINISTERS AT LARGE.

The establishment of the Ministry at Large, in Boston, dates back to Nov. 5th, 1826, when Rev. Dr. Joseph Tuckerman entered on the duties of what he called "the mission to the poor" in that city; though previous to that time the moral claims of the poor were not entirely neglected, but some provision of missionary service had been made for them by a society, for their moral and religious instruction. The Ministry at Large, in the spirit of Dr. Tuckerman, is adopted in the following places in the United States, and in England.*

THE THURSDAY LECTURE.

This Lecture was commenced by John Cotton, second pastor of the First Church in Boston, in the autumn of 1633, and was at first sustained by himself alone.

Afterwards, by courtesy, it came to be preached by each of the ministers of the Boston Association in turn.

In the year 1845, the Association gave it back into the hands of the pastor of the First Church, to whom by right it still belonged.

By his invitation, the following gentlemen are pledged to assist him

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

Charity has become a matter too much of mere calculation. When a person is called charitable, the question is immediately asked, "How much money has he given? What donations has he made?"—as if the spirit of charity were nothing in the ordinary acts of the daily intercourse of life.

If people have no money to give, they may learn to be charitable, courteous, and just. These qualities are better than money, and yet how many congratulate themselves upon the merit of giving,—without cultivating the sentiment which alone is truly to be honored.

What is that charity worth, which makes the subject of it feel his obligation? What is that friend worth, who coldly and indifferently passes his friend when in adversity? When Sir Walter Scott was urged not to prop the falling credit of an acquaintance, he replied: "The man was my friend when friends were few; and I will be his, now that his enemies are many."

We have many Charitable Institutions, organized for the purpose of feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, providing for the sick, the dumb, the blind, and the lame,—and all this is creditable to our country and to the age. But we have thought that an Institution might be useful, whose objects should be, to cultivate the spirit of charity among the Christian sects, among neighbors, among citizens, among parties; so that private character might be held sacred, truth honored, and slander detested. So that an evil word spoken against another, who is absent, shall be viewed as more dangerous to society than the dagger aimed at his heart. So that hypocrisy shall be considered a moral theft, and a willing ear given to slander, a crime as disgraceful as the act of receiving stolen goods—knowing them to be so.

We are aware that we have many Associations of Reform; some are professedly Charitable, and some are Religious—which profess charity. But as we often hear the members of these Institutions speaking without the spirit of charity, we have supposed a further provision necessary in order to secure the practice of this most beautiful virtue.

The number of Temperance Societies in Massachusetts, returned to us by correspondents, is 40. Some of them are quite large and very active.

TEMPERANCE. It is stated that there are 1,500,000 persons in the United States who abstain from spirituous liquors; 5,000 temperance societies, embracing more than 600,000 members. More than 2,000 distilleries have been stopped; more than 5,000 merchants have ceased from the traffic. It is estimated that 30,000 persons are now sober, who, had it not been for the temperance societies, would have been sots; and that at least 20,000 families are now at ease and in comfort, who would otherwise have been in poverty and disgrace, by drunken inmates.

BUSINESS OF MASSACHUSETTS.

During the past year business has been generally prosperous, although many have complained of "hard times." A safe and moderate business is called a dull business, and if people buy only what they want, traders think that they cannot thrive. This is a mistake. They can thrive with no other. The number of failures reported by the Chancery Courts of Massachusetts from Oct. 1, 1847 to Dec. 15th, 1848 — is 1274 — 346 of which took place in the City of Boston, and 45 in the new town of Lawrence. It must be considered, however, that most of the failures which have taken place the past year, are not reported to the public.

Whatever may be said of the depression of trade here, our prosperity is far above that enjoyed by any other people. Money is plenty in Great Britain, and yet business is prostrate. This may be said of all Europe at the present time.

We have seen an extract of a letter from an American Merchant in Montreal, who says: —

"Within the year past, over five thousand persons, mostly enterprising men, formerly doing respectable business in Montreal, have been obliged to abandon the city to suffer complete bankruptcy. Over five thousand tenements, stores, shops and dwellings are without tenants, nor can they be rented at any price. The most business streets are comparatively deserted by trade, and it is no fiction that grass grows upon the solitary pavement.

"Since the increased facilities given to trade between this city and the Canada merchants, especially of Canada West, there is scarcely a trader who resorts to Montreal for goods."

It must be recorded that the close of the year 1848 is truly the "golden age" for the United States. Thousands of our citizens are starting for California, with high expectations of sudden and unlimited wealth.

That the territory of California will prove to be of incalculable value to the United States, in a national point of view, we have no question. The official documents of Gov. Mason to our government, render this quite certain.

But while our people have good reason to congratulate themselves upon such an acquisition, they must not mistake the mere objects of a Conventional Currency for the results of industry and labor. Permanent success can only come from industry.

We would commend the good sense of the following paragraph taken from the last number of Mr. Colman's valuable work on European Agriculture. He says: —

"The true wealth of a community is its labor, its productive labor. A man is not the richer for houses which he cannot occupy; lands which he cannot use; money that he cannot spend. He might own a continent in the moon, but what would that avail him? He might die of starvation in the vaults of the Bank of England, or in the undisturbed possession of the richest of the mines of Peru. Labor is the great source and instrument of subsistence and wealth."

In our last volume, we took occasion to speak very favorably of the original Health Insurance Institution, the Massachusetts Company, projected by Mr. Stimson, in February, 1846. The eminent success of this corporation during the last twelve months has more than realized the sanguine expectations of those who wish well to the WORKING CLASSES. From the delicate and embarrassing character of investigations into the causes of physical disability in females, the Massachusetts Company (Tremont Street) insure men only, and on this account their business is not so large as it would be if they insured both sexes; but they have already increased from the 1,400 which we reported last year, to upwards of FIVE THOUSAND. In the meantime, they have paid out $10,950 to sick members, chiefly mechanics. How great a blessing this liberal relief must have been to the most of its recipients! The institution now pays monthly, a sum rarely less than $1,500 00 to its policy-holders who become disabled by disease or accident; and if its business increases in the ratio it now promises, it is not unlikely that the time will come when its disbursements to sick members, throughout New England, will not fall far short of $100,000 00 per annum.

The area of this depot is about forty acres; and, united with the Eastern, which it adjoins, makes one grand freight depot for the shipping interest on the deepest water in Boston harbor, of fifty acres, extending from the Ferry Wharf southerly on Marginal Street, 2,150 feet, and westerly, 1,000 feet, to the commissioners' line, in the harbor channel.

It is the design of this corporation to establish an extensive freight Depot, at East Boston, adjoining the Eastern Railroad and British Steamship Depots, on the deepest and best sheltered part of Boston harbor, for the accommodation of, and forming a junction with, the several railroads terminating in Boston. This depot is more particularly designed, however, for the great Northern line of roads now built and in progress of construction through the principal manufacturing districts of this State, and thence through New Hampshire and Vermont into both Canadas, and reaching Northern New York at Ogdensburg on the St. Lawrence at the mouth of Ontario, connecting Boston by the shortest and most expeditious way with the Great West. Another object in view, in establishing this depot, is that of securing to Boston, and the United States, the carrying-trade of the Canadas. This project is one of the greatest importance to the country. Indeed, it is one that promises to render all other railroads in this region in the highest degree available. Samuel S. Lewis, Esq. is the projector of it, and we are glad to observe that some of our most intelligent and energetic citizens are associated with him in this great enterprise. A similar improvement is now in progress in Liverpool. A tunnel $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles in length is in the course of construction, under that town, designed to connect the Railroad Depot at Edgehill with the North Docks at the water's edge, where the foreign shipping centres. Two thousand men are now employed on this great work.

The work on this important improvement has been commenced, and more than $500,000 dollars have been expended. In the Report of the Company, May, 1848, the Directors say:—

The charter of this company allows any other railroad corporation to establish Depots on their premises, and authorizes such railroad corporations as may establish depots there, to hold lands necessary therefor, in fee simple, or otherwise.

Boston, from its favorable position, being nearer than New York to the Upper and Lower British Provinces, and also to Europe, by sailing vessels, from four to seven days, and by steam, from one and a half to two days, is destined to become a great export city, when her railroads, now in progress of construction, shall have reached the Canadas, the Lakes, and the Great West, affording facilities to bring to her port for shipment the vast products of the West. These roads will be completed to Ogdensburg, it is expected, in the year 1849 : and then it is supposed that the advantages of Boston, as a shipping port, will be fully developed, and will be found equal to any in the Union. It is also predicted that our railroad connections, commencing at the depot of this company, on the deepest water in the Harbor, extending and communicating with both the Canadas by the shortest and most expeditious route, that Boston will also become the port of entry for the Canadas, and that goods arriving here in the Steamships, after a passage of twelve to thirteen days, may be delivered in Montreal and Upper Canada, within fifteen days of their shipment in Liverpool, and chargeable with no other expenses than freight on shipboard and railroad ; thus placing the Canada importer, by the way of Boston, on an equal footing as to time (and with but trifling more expense) with the New York importer, via Boston. The following table of imports and exports will show the relative increase, in Boston and New York, for the last fifteen years (specie included).

FOREIGN IMPORTS.

	Boston.	New York.
1832,	$15,760,572	$50,995,924
1847,	47,110,761	96,036,257
	<hr/>	<hr/>
Increase,	$31,350,189	$45,040,333

EXPORTS.

1832,	$10,107,768	$22,792,593
1847,	10,513,132	52,879,275
	<hr/>	<hr/>
Increase,	$405,364	$30,086,682

This statement shows, that while the imports of Boston have increased about 210 per cent. in fifteen years, against an increase in New York of about 90 per cent., the exports of Boston, in the same length of time, have only increased about 4 per cent., while in New York the increase of exports has been about 130 per cent. In view of the facts herein presented, it is evident that the destiny of Boston is onward; and that when her railroad system is in full operation to the Canadas and the great West, she has only to avail herself of it, and her favorable position, to become, not only a great export city, but also the port of entry for the Canadas.

WATER CELEBRATION.

The Water Celebration on the 25th of October, 1848, was an event of such extraordinary interest, we have deemed it a subject worthy of an extended notice. We have inserted the addresses of the Hon. Nathan Hale, and of His Honor, Josiah Quincy, Jr., the Mayor, as valuable historical documents, to be preserved for future reference. The following is an extract from an article published in the "Boston Post," on the 27th Oct. We regret that our limits will not permit us to add more.

"Boston was never blessed with a finer October day than on Wednesday last. The dawn gave certain assurance of bright and beautiful weather, and long before the guns had announced that the ceremonies for celebrating the introduction of water from Lake Cochituate would go forward, the people from the country began to pour into the city, and by eight o'clock the sidewalks of our principal streets were rendered nearly impassable by the crowds of strangers who occupied them, gazing upon the flags, banners, triumphal arches and other decorations suspended across the streets, and the preparations for the celebration. We know of no means of getting at an approximation to the numbers who visited the city for this purpose; but some idea may be formed of the vastness of the number, by a glance at the numerous avenues, railroads, bridges and ferries, by which the concourse entered Boston. They are eighteen in number, viz: The Western Avenue, (Mill Dam,) West Boston Bridge, East Cambridge Bridge, Lowell Railroad, Me. Extension Railroad, Fitchburg Railroad, Warren Bridge, Charles River Bridge, Winisimmet Ferry, East Boston Ferry, Eastern Railroad, North Bridge, South Bridge, Old Colony Railroad, Worcester Railroad, Harrison Avenue, Washington Street Neck and Tremont Road. Steamers, crowded with passengers, also arrived from Bangor and Portland. A majority of these channels poured in, not their hundreds or thousands merely, but their tens of thousands, swelling the aggregate up to one hundred and fifty thousand, at least.

"There never was such an overwhelming gathering of people from the country towns and the neighboring states, in Boston before. This fact proved the deep interest which the 'Long Pond project' had excited far and near.

"As to the appearance of things in the city during the morning and forenoon, no adequate idea could be formed by any observer on terra firma. An aeronaut, suspended over the centre in a balloon, might have been able to give some account of it. Never was such a scene of life and bustle without any actual disorder. While guns were firing and bells ringing, and the air filled with music from scores of full bands, varied at every turn by the rattling drum, and 'ear-piercing fife,' the military companies, firemen, and a hundred other distinct organizations, were continually crossing, meeting, or passing each other on the way to their respective points of rendezvous. Nothing could be more animating than these preliminary movements, which spread over every part of the city, and by distributing the display, and carrying it home to the doors of those who could not conveniently leave their houses, added greatly to the interest of the occasion. These marchings and counter-marchings lasted full six hours, and meanwhile thousands upon thousands of spectators were congregating on the Common to witness the review of the military by Gov. Briggs, at 11 o'clock, on the parade ground on the Charles street side. Precisely at that hour, the line, comprising twenty-four companies, all under the command of brigadier-general B. F. Edmands, was formed. Opposite the centre were posted the Independent Cadets, under Colonel Sever, performing duty as body guard to the commander-in-chief, who was there with his civil and military suite, and the review came off in brilliant style, the troops forming the most numerous array of the volunteer and uniformed militia of the commonwealth that has been witnessed since the passage of the law under which it was organized.

"The next principal feature in the business of the day was the forming and moving of the procession. Contrary to all custom, the performance greatly exceeded the promise held out in the programme published by the committee of arrangements."

ADDRESS OF HON. NATHAN HALE.

Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen,

The vast concourse of our fellow citizens here assembled, testifies how deep an interest is felt in the event which we are met to commemorate. It is the accomplishment of a great public work, which is of equal benefit to every citizen. It is the supply of a want common to every human being — of the pure element which is an indispensable ingredient in the ordinary sustenance of life — of an essential agent, for the preservation of health, cleanliness, and comfort,—for the protection of our dwellings against conflagration,—and for the prosecution of many of the arts of life.

Boston, in the periods of her early history, was celebrated for the abundance of her springs of pure water. But in the progress of a great community, nothing essential to its growth can be stationary, or limited. These springs are no longer sufficient for the nourishment of the vast population which commerce, industry, and liberal institutions, have planted on this peninsula. The same principle which compels us to seek for food and articles of luxury beyond the products of the neighboring country, leads us to look abroad for a more ample supply of water. We at the same time avail ourselves of one of the most obvious benefits of a compact society, in making use of its combined resources, to provide this necessary of life to every family, and to relieve them from the labor of drawing it from the recesses of the earth, or of gathering it in cisterns, as it falls from the clouds.

To enable our citizens to accomplish this object, the Legislature of the Commonwealth, at their request, granted to them full authority to take the necessary measures for supplying the City with pure water. The execution of that authority has been conferred by you, Gentlemen of the City Council, upon the Water Commissioners, who are now before you. It has become my duty, in their behalf, to state how far the trust thus devolved upon them has been executed.

We have not been insensible to the magnitude of the trust. We have felt that the duty was imposed upon us to furnish an ample supply, for all the wants of every citizen; and to draw it from a source of unquestioned purity. We have not been unmindful of the progressive character of this community, and of the rapid increase of its population, and its wants. The number of our citizens has been twice doubled within the space of forty years, and it may be again doubled, in the twenty years to come. We have looked therefore not merely to the present demands of the city for water, but to its prospective wants.

We have looked also to futurity, in determining the character of the works which it has been our duty to construct. They are built of materials imperishable in their nature, and the principal works are of a structure which we trust will be as durable as time itself.

The source from which the supply is drawn, is a Lake, situated in an elevated part of the country, twenty miles distant from the city, remote from the habitations of men, and secluded from the seats of those occupations which might subject it to causes of impurity. This lake covers an area of a mile square; it is of great depth, and is supplied by the rains which fall upon a large surrounding country, as well as by springs and streams never liable to be rendered turbid by inundation. Its banks are mostly covered by a growth of forest trees and shrubbery; and, to secure it against the intrusion of men or animals, a margin of land, entirely surrounding its shores, has been acquired and will be separately enclosed, as the property of the city.

The waters of this lake have flowed for ages through a remote part of the country to the ocean. Their natural outlet is now forever closed; and a new channel has been formed, by the excavation of the intervening barrier of earth and rock, for conducting them by a gentle declivity to the city. Through this channel, a covered aqueduct of brick masonry has been built, to secure the flow of a uniform current, sufficient to supply the wants of the city, even should its population become double its present numbers.

This aqueduct, instead of inviting admiration, like some of the works of ancient art, constructed for a similar purpose, is almost concealed from view, by the earth which has been replaced over it, and the public will be left to judge of its magnitude and difficulty, and of the labor and skill required in its accomplishment, chiefly from a computation of its cost. Its value, however, will be measured by the degree in which it shall accomplish its purpose.

In those parts of the work which are exposed to view, it was decided to adopt a style of architecture, severe and simple, indicative of a prudent economy, but at the same time such as should not degrade the character of a great public work, or give offence even to a fastidious taste.

The supply of pure water thus conducted to the city from its secluded source, is not simply poured into the public squares and market places, but it is conveyed through subterranean passages to the dwellings of every citizen; and, if they desire it, to every one's chamber and closet. It is not left to be borne by manual labor, from deep vaults, and stagnant cisterns, but it ascends, in obedience to a mysterious law of nature, to such part of every mansion, as its possessor may direct. Sprung from an elevated source, and devoted to the service of man, in the supply of his domestic wants, it is taught to mount again to the same elevation, and to maintain its level, until it shall have accomplished all the purposes to which it is destined.

To obtain the power of distribution at all times throughout the elevated parts of the city, it was necessary to erect large reservoirs, at an elevation of 120 feet above the sea, and nearly equal to that of the original source. One of these, situated on the nearest neighboring height beyond the limits of the city, is capable of containing 100,000,000 of gallons of water, a quantity sufficient for the uses of the city for a period of two weeks, should the supply be interrupted by any accident for that period. Into this reservoir the aqueduct is capable of discharging more than 10 millions of gallons every day, flowing by a gentle current—traversing the 15 miles of its course in 24 hours,—and falling in that distance about 4 feet from the level of its original source.

The other reservoirs, yet unfinished, situated on the most elevated points of the old city, and of South Boston, will perform the functions which belong to the heart in the animal system, forcing the life-sustaining fluid to its distant members, and transfusing it through intricate arteries to every part of the body. These reservoirs will be completed in the course of the ensuing year.

From the several reservoirs the water is conveyed, not only through every street of the city, but into the houses of every citizen. The distribution by service pipes to private houses, in public works of this nature, is usually made at the private cost of the persons supplied; but it is here executed, in common with the residue of the work, at the public charge, making a very sensible increase of the labor and cost of the work. The tubes leading to the central reservoirs, and through the streets, are made of cast iron,—a material which long experience has shown to be best adapted to this use, for its strength and durability. They are of most liberal dimensions, and their whole extent is more than 60 miles. The smaller pipes, by which the water is introduced into the dwellings of the inhabitants, are chiefly of lead. It is a material more ductile than iron, and on careful inquiry it has been judged, in every respect, best adapted for this use.

The further duty has devolved upon the Water Commissioners, of indemnifying the proprietors of lands and of water rights, taken for the use of the city, for the injury which they have suffered, from this appropriation of their property. We have entered upon the discharge of this delicate trust, with a scrupulous regard for the rights of the numerous claimants, and with a deep sense of the obligations of equity and honor, which demand the adoption on the part of the city, of a liberal and generous rule of compensation; while at the same time, we are bound, by a like sense of justice, to resist claims which may appear to be extortionate. Much progress has been made in the discharge of this difficult duty. The claims for lands surrounding the Lake, are nearly adjusted, as are also a large portion of those for lands occupied by the aqueduct.

To obviate the necessity of fixing a valuation of the water rights on Concord River, which might have suffered diminution from the diversion of the waters of Cochituate Lake, we have provided two artificial reservoirs of great capacity, which will be replenished, during every winter, and will be capable of supplying to the river far more than an equivalent for all the water diverted from it for the use of the city.

Preparatory to the supply of water to the inhabitants of the city, we have, in pursuance of the duty imposed upon us by the Water Act, prepared a scale of annual rents, to be charged for the use of it. It has been decided that the rents shall begin from the 1st of January next. The charges have been arranged upon the lowest scale which can afford the promise of an adequate indemnity for the cost of the work, and at lower rates in general than are paid for water in any city within our knowledge. It was deemed suitable that the fruits of an enterprise, prosecuted at the common charge of all the citizens, and for the common benefit, should be enjoyed by all, on the most liberal terms, consistent with the sacred duty of providing for the debt, which is a necessary condition of the accomplishment of the work.

It remains for me only to perform the grateful duty of acknowledging the obligations which the Water Commissioners are under, for the cordial coöperation of all those who have been associated with them in the prosecution of this enterprise. To the skill, energy, and assiduity of the Chief and Consulting Engineers, we are eminently indebted for the promptness and success with which the work has been carried forward, and the satisfactory manner in which it has been executed. We acknowledge also with much satisfaction the skill, fidelity, and untiring industry of the Resident Engineers, and the hearty coöperation of the assistants, and the whole engineering corps of both departments, by which the successful progress of the work has been most essentially promoted.

Our acknowledgments are also especially due to the able, faithful and energetic contractors, by whose agency almost all the branches of the work have been executed, either in the furnishing of materials, or the immediate prosecution of the work. We were fortunate in meeting with men in this relation, in the various departments of the work, skilled in their respective duties, fertile in resources, and faithful to their engagements. The vigor and perseverance displayed in the perforation of the tunnel sections, and in laying the foundations of the aqueduct through a long extent of quicksands, deserve especial commendation. Every portion of the work itself, we trust, will bear perpetual testimony to the fidelity of the execution.

To you, in an especial manner, Mr. Mayor, to the gentlemen of the City Council, and in particular to the members of the Water Committee and the Committee of Finance, we present our most hearty thanks for the firm support which you have afforded us in the discharge of our duties. Every assistance which we could ask of the Municipal authorities has been at all times freely rendered. The City Treasurer, also, is entitled to our thanks and earnest commendation, for the admirable regularity and promptness with which payment has been made, of the orders of the Commissioners, and the ease and confidence with which he has enabled us to manage the financial concerns of our trust. Under his efficient administration, notwithstanding the long continued and severe pressure on the money affairs of the country, the City Treasury, in aid of this work, has poured out its resources like water. We trust that the vast expenditure which has been thus made, will prove an investment, which shall afford a perpetual revenue of benefits, rivalling those of the most successful enterprises of the day.

I cannot forbear, on this occasion, the expression of the warmest gratitude, for the countenance and encouragement with which we have been supported, and cheered, by our fellow citizens, in the prosecution of our arduous duties. Under the smile of their approval, the task has been light, and the labor a pleasure. It has been with the utmost gratification, that we have witnessed the patience and good humor with which every class of citizens have submitted to the endless inconveniences, arising from the necessary interruptions of the streets, during the progress of the work. A readiness has been manifested on all sides, to ascribe these inconveniences to an uncontrollable necessity, and to submit to them without a murmur.

A similar courtesy has been exhibited by the citizens and municipal authorities of Roxbury, Brookline, and all the towns which are traversed by our works. They appear to have justly appreciated the importance of the enterprise, and, as citizens of the Commonwealth, to have felt a common interest with their brethren of the metropolis, in its anticipated benefits. May this exhibition of kindly sympathy excite in our minds a reciprocal kindness of feeling, and may that Almighty Being who holdeth the waters in the hollow of his hand, and poureth them out for the use of his children, crown with his blessing a work which has been accomplished for the common benefit of a great people.

ADDRESS OF THE MAYOR, HON. JOSIAH QUINCY, JR.

Centuries have elapsed since the aboriginal inhabitants of this land sought the sweet springs that welled up among these hills, and gave to the place, in allusion to them, the name of Shawmut. We have come, fellow citizens, to witness the completion of a work that is to give the peninsula a new title to its Indian name.

And we have not come alone. Our friends, our neighbors, our fellow citizens from every part of the State, and from the whole of New England, have assembled to sympathise with the joy of the citizens of Boston, as their fathers rushed to their assistance in the hour of peril.

Every sect and every party, every age and every calling, have this day forgotten their distinctions and their differences, and remember only that they are children of a common parent, who are to receive a common blessing.

We have come to congratulate one another in what this element is to do for health and purity, temperance and safety, and to rejoice that these blessings are secured to those who shall inhabit this peninsula forever.

On such an occasion, the most appropriate exercise is a statement of the origin and progress of the work, of the financial arrangements that have been made for its construction, of the effect it is to produce upon the interests of the city, and to express our gratitude to those who have so efficiently and rapidly hastened on its completion.

The subject of supplying the city with water was first introduced to the attention of the City Council by Mr. Quincy, the second Mayor of the city, and was again and again brought forward by his successors in office. The want of this essential element for luxury, for comfort, for health, and for protection from fire, increased daily, and numerous projects were suggested for its supply.

The present mode was first proposed in the Report of a Board of Commissioners, consisting of Messrs. Treadwell, Baldwin, and Hale, in the year 1837. It was not then recommended by a majority of those Commissioners, on the ground that the cost would be greater than the city would be willing to encounter, and that the wants of the then population could, in their opinion, be supplied at less expense; the method was deemed practicable, the supply ample, and its adoption was strongly recommended by Mr. Baldwin.

In the year 1844, this source was more fully investigated by a new commission, consisting of Messrs. Patrick T. Jackson, Baldwin and Hale, and was strongly recommended by them as the most satisfactory of all the modes which had been suggested. It was approved by the City Government of that year, and an act was passed, granting the necessary powers, subject to ratification by vote of the inhabitants of the city. It was, however, rejected by a majority of voters, on the ground chiefly that another source was entitled to a preference.

The City Council thereupon wisely resolved to employ two distinguished engineers from other States to make a thorough examination of the modes of supply which had for a long time engaged the attention of our citizens, and to report thereon. They, after a thorough investigation, adopted the plan which had been proposed by the former commission. In conformity with this recommendation, and in compliance with the declared wish of the citizens, the city council applied to the Legislature for authority to supply the city with water from Long Pond. This authority was granted by the passage of the Act of March, 1846, which conferred on the city all the powers necessary to take the waters, to convey them to the city, to raise by loan the funds necessary to defray the cost, and to make the proper regulations for their distribution.

For carrying the powers, so far as related to the execution of the work, into effect, the present board of Water Commissioners was appointed on the 3d day of May of that year. They entered at once upon the discharge of their duties, digested a plan of operations, and appointed engineers. For the purpose of securing greater energy in its prosecution and a more thorough supervision, they established two distinct departments, with a chief engineer in charge of each, whose duties were entirely disconnected. One department was employed in conveying the waters of Cochituate Lake to Brookline, and in the construction of a reservoir for its reception at that place. The other by a system of iron pipes conveyed the water from this reservoir to the city, distributed it through the streets, and into the dwellings of all the inhabitants, and superintended the construction of reservoirs on Beacon Hill and at South Boston.

On a thorough survey of the country between Lake Cochituate and Boston harbor, some material improvements were made in the line originally indicated. By tunnelling through two hills in Newton and Brookline, the length of the aqueduct was reduced about a mile; a high and costly embankment over lands of great value in Brighton was dispensed with, and the necessity of conveying the water in pipes across the Brighton valley was avoided.

The route of the aqueduct crosses the summit of the land which intervenes between the Concord and Charles rivers, and also that between the Charles river at Newton Lower Falls and the tide waters at Brookline.

In cutting through these summits, it was found necessary to perforate ledges of porphyritic rocks of the hardest description.

The prosecution of the surveys and other preparations for the commencement of the various branches of the work, was greatly expedited by the previous acquaintance of the commissioners with the routes to be explored, and with the system of works proposed. They were forfortunate also in obtaining the services of engineers, in whose skill they justly placed the utmost confidence, and who cordially coöperated in carrying out their views, and in an energetic prosecution of the work. Early attention was paid to those branches which would occupy the longest period in the execution, and to such arrangements that the work at no point should be delayed while waiting the completion of another.

The location of the aqueduct was so far completed that a large portion of it was put under contract for excavation in a little more than three months from the appointment of the commissioners. The contracts for the residue, including the Tunnel sections and a large portion of the iron pipes, were made the same year.

The aqueduct of brick masonry extending from the Lake to Brookline is nearly fifteen miles in length. This structure is of the oval form, approved by scientific engineers for its strength and capacity in proportion to the amount of material used, and to the adaptation of its shape and dimensions, to be conveniently entered for the purpose of inspection. The bricks are laid in hydraulic cement, which acquires a hardness and tenacity nearly equal to that of brick or stone, and the structure is consequently of great strength. It is embedded throughout its entire length in the earth to a depth in no part less than four feet, and is, in the greater portion of its course, below the natural surface of the earth, in cuts covered by a permanent embankment.

The obstacles to be overcome have not been of a light or trivial nature. The aqueduct after leaving the gate house at the Lake follows up the valley of Snakebrook to a dividing ridge that separates the waters of the Charles from those of the Merrimac. In this distance the difficulties encountered in the construction of conduit masonry arose from the character of the material in the foundation, no less than from the amount of water to be removed by pumps. The conduit here lies wholly in excavation, varying from 15 to 52 feet in depth, and for three quarters of a mile occupies the bed of Snakebrook at an average level of 23 feet below the ordinary surface of its waters. The narrowness of the valley rendered it necessary to maintain an open channel for this brook, parallel to, and not more than 25 feet distant from the line. From the slight descent of the brook and the extent of country drained by it, it was impossible to prevent a periodical overflow, which, as the material was quicksand, produced the most disastrous results — the banks caving in and covering unfinished work, rendering it as difficult of completion as when it was begun. At times like these there was no cessation of labor; night forces relieved day forces — and the five steam engines attached to pumps capable of raising 12,000,000 of gallons 10 feet high in 24 hours, were constantly employed, and at times their extreme capacity failed to free the excavation. Unaided by steam this work could not have been performed in less than five years, and the expense of constructing the conduit in quicksand, subject to inundations for that length of time, would have increased in still greater proportions.

In the same section the extreme hardness of the rock was such as to require seven times the amount of labor and powder usually required for the like amount of rock excavation.

The Tunnel excavation was a work of greater difficulty than was anticipated, from the unusual hardness of a portion of the rock excavated, and the large quantity of water which flowed from the surface through the seams. The two tunnels, measuring 3,400 feet in length, were excavated in eighteen months, by separate parties, laboring at ten distinct shafts of from 70 to 75 feet in depth, and carrying forward the work in each direction from the bottom. Successive parties of miners relieved one another three times in each day, each set of laborers working eight hours. The water and portions of rock removed were chiefly raised from the shafts by steam power. For the prompt execution of these and other difficult portions of the work, the Commissioners were fortunate in having secured the services of energetic contractors.

Another principal branch of the work consists of the iron pipes for the introduction of the water from the reservoir in Brookline to the city, and for the distribution of the water through the streets to the vicinity of each dwelling. The first class pipes, one 36 inches, and the other 30 inches in diameter, are together over 40,000 feet in length. The other class vary from 24 inches to 6 inches in diameter, and measures in all 190,000 feet in length, extending through nearly all the streets and courts of the city, making the aggregate length of iron pipes about 60 miles.

In addition to the pipes for conveying the water through the streets to the vicinity of the dwellings of the inhabitants, pipes have been laid for conveying the water from the street mains into the premises of individuals, and within the walls of every citizen desiring to be supplied. The aggregate length of this pipe already laid is nearly 100,000 feet. This part of the cost of distribution is usually made a charge on the individual supplied, but as it can be done at less cost by those charged with the execution of the main work, and as it will prove an inducement to a more immediate adoption of the use of the water by all the citizens, the City Council deemed it expedient that this charge should be defrayed at the public expense. It is manifest, however, that it will add considerably to the aggregate cost of the work.

Two large and extensive structures, very important to the completeness of the system of distribution, are yet unfinished. Those are the Reservoirs on Beacon Hill and on Telegraph Hill at South Boston. On the first of these the work is far advanced, but its magnitude is such as will prevent its completion before the end of another year. In obtaining a site for it, it was necessary to remove a large public school house, and a number of valuable private dwellings.

For the Reservoir at South Boston, the Water Commissioners have made a purchase of a tract of land, well adapted to the purpose, in concert with a committee acting under authority of the city council for laying out a public square for the embellishment of that part of the city. The land thus purchased is one of the beautiful heights made celebrated, under the name of Dorchester Heights, by a memorable event of the war of the revolution, connected inseparably with the name of the Father of his country. The selection of this site for the reservoir is not only highly appropriate for the immediate objects for which this structure is designed, but it will aid in carrying into effect the desirable object of procuring this elevated spot of ground, for the ornament of the city.

The two city reservoirs, although not indispensable for the distribution of the water, are yet necessary to the maintenance of such a head as will ensure an unremitted supply throughout the city at all times. With the aid of these reservoirs, the system of distribution promises to be in a high degree satisfactory.

For the purpose of supplying the reservoir at South Boston, it was necessary to lay a pipe across the navigable channel which separates South Boston from the old city; this was a work of some difficulty. It has been accomplished by dredging a cavity below the bottom of the navigable channel in front of the draw through which vessels pass, and sinking into it a section of pipe 40 feet in length laid in a strong box of wood and iron with the ends converged upward in the form of an inverted syphon. These ends are connected above the level of the tide with pipes carried across the water under the Bridge, and supported on piles, in a box filled with materials suitable for its protection against frost. This pipe is of 20 inch diameter, and the section which was sunk below the channel was of a weight of 30 tons. The depth to which it is sunk, is sufficient to admit of its being covered with earth for its protection from the keels of vessels. The pipe within the box is surrounded with hydraulic cement to preserve it from contact with the salt water.

The various works of masonry, with the exception of the brick conduit, are chiefly of Quincy or Rockport granite, and are of the most substantial description. Among these are the gate houses at Cochituate Lake and at the Brookline reservoir. These houses, necessary for the protection of the works for regulating the admission and discharge of water, are in a plain and unostentatious style of architecture, but of tasteful proportion, and appropriate to the character of the work of which they form a part. The smaller structures, for protecting the pipe chambers, waste weirs, and other entrances to the aqueduct, are of a similar style of masonry.

To ensure their greater safety and durability, the larger structures are covered with roofs of iron, and the smaller with stone. The bridge, composed of three arches of thirty feet span each, and an arch supporting the embankment over a public road in Needham, are beautiful specimens of architecture, of the most durable character.

In addition to these works for the immediate purposes of supplying water to the city, and for protecting the main works against injury, two other structures have been erected, which, with their appendages, are of much importance. These are substantial and permanent dams, for forming reservoirs to contain water, designed for replenishing Concord river, as a substitute for the water of which it will be deprived by the diversion of Cochituate Lake. One of these reservoirs, at Whitehall, in Hopkinton, will cover an area of more than 600 acres, and the other at Marlboro', on a tributary of Elizabeth river, an area of 280 acres. These reservoirs, it is anticipated, will be filled by the rains of every winter, and will furnish throughout the dry seasons of the year for the use of the Middlesex canal and of the proprietors of water privileges on the river, far more than an equivalent for the power of which they will be deprived by the diversion of the waters of the Lake.

The purity of the water has also been ensured by removing all objectionable matter from the space between high and low water mark, around the entire margin of the Lake, a distance of more than sixteen miles, and by building a dam across the outlet of every meadow connected with it, which by a waste weir discharges all the waters which the brooks emptying into them supply, after a depth of three feet has been attained. The area of the lake, when raised to the height intended, will contain two billions of gallons above the level of the conduit by which it is conveyed to Boston.

Which amount could be increased, if required, from other ponds in the neighborhood, or from the Sudbury river, which can be entirely commanded, if needed, under the charter granted by the State.

There are other sources of satisfaction connected with this work; notwithstanding its nature, it has been performed without the stimulus of intoxicating liquor. It has never been suspected of being used as a political engine—and the hire of its laborers has never been kept back an hour. The labor and materials have been paid for when performed and delivered, and there are no outstanding debts for either now in existence.

I have spoken thus at length, fellow-citizens, of the nature and progress of this work. It has been constructed with a rapidity unparalleled in the history of great public undertakings—obstacles, deemed insurmountable, have been overcome—the masonry that is buried deep, and which will never again meet the eye of man, is as perfect and finished as that which rises in eternal granite in our midst. Solidity has not been sacrificed to expedition. The rapidity is owing to the energy, the genius, and the skill of the Water Commissioners, the Engineers, and the Contractors—and they have erected for themselves, in this work, a monument as permanent as the blessing they have secured.

In the Charter of 1845, it was provided that in addition to their other duties, the Water Commissioners should be charged with power to borrow and expend money without reference to the City Council. This Charter was most wisely rejected by the people, partly on the ground that no one should have the power of involving the city in debt who was not annually responsible to the people at the ballot box. The Commissioners were thus relieved from the labors and anxieties attendant on financial operations in times like those that have existed during the past two years, and have been enabled to devote themselves exclusively to the forwarding of the work, without being distracted by duties that were always pressing and always liable to misrepresentation. These duties have devolved on the Committee on Finance, which consists of the Mayor and seven members of the Common Council. As upon this point is one of peculiar interest, I shall be pardoned for dilating upon it a little.

The original estimate for this work fell rather short of three millions of dollars, and if we take into consideration that during its progress the Reservoirs at Brookline, on Beacon Hill, and at South Boston, have been quadrupled in size, that the iron pipe has been greatly increased in capacity and carried into every house, and compensation reservoirs provided, we shall find that the original estimates for the work, as originally contemplated, have not been exceeded. About three millions have been expended, and the amount required to complete the reservoirs and distribute the water at South Boston, will, it is estimated, amount to half a million more. If to this be added the interest during the construction, the cost, when completed, will not vary much from four millions of dollars.

The negotiation of this large amount of money, in times when famine and revolution abroad, and change of tariff at home, have disarranged all financial calculations based on past experience, has, of course, been arduous and perplexing.

Two different agents have been employed, to obtain a loan in Europe, but without success. They have been made principally among ourselves; and the average interest of about three millions of dollars is less than six per cent.

This, although a much lower rate than has been paid by any other corporation, is higher than would be required in ordinary times, on the securities of the City of Boston. The Committee have, therefore, under the authority given by the Legislature, borrowed, as a temporary loan, payable within five years, about $1,700,000, believing that before the expiration of the time, loans could be made at a much lower rate of interest, and being satisfied that the low price of labor and materials, arising from the financial pressure, have more than counterbalanced the rate of interest for so short a period. Should their views be carried out, and the loans made to fall due in moderate amounts annually, they may be extinguished by the sales of public lands, without any charge for the principal to the public.

In this connection it may be well to remark, that the lands belonging to the city amount to about five million of square feet. Those at the South part of the city are now preparing for the market, at an expense, of which the interest will, it is believed, be more than covered by the rents of wharf property, and incidental advantages.

When these lands are prepared, if annual sales are made to pay the debt as it falls due, in a few years the debt for this water will be paid from this source, and the water will either be distributed without cost, or become a permanent source of increasing income to the city.

When we consider that so great part of our territory is reclaimed from the sea, and that such large addition will be made by filling the back bay, and rendering what is now a nuisance an ornament to the city, and that without this supply of water these lands would be of little value, we cannot but feel that the prosperity of this city will derive an incalculable impulse from this source, and that without it those whose labors will contribute to our wealth, must reside out of our territorial limits.

In this connection I cannot but speak of the great and only objection that can be raised to this enterprise—its expense. As I have before stated, the whole expenditure, when completed, will fall short of $4,000,000. The interest on this is $240,000 a year, from which is to be deducted the amount of water rents. Pipes from the mains are inserted at the expense of the city into every house. The water rent is placed at a price that renders it economical for every one to take it. All citizens, whether they take it or not, will, after the expiration of two years from the completion of the work, be obliged to make up the deficiency of the rent in the general tax. All therefore are called upon by the natural desire of enjoying what they are obliged to pay for, from economy, and from public spirit, to take the water and receive a blessing, which, after possessing one year, neither they, nor their families would abandon for ten times its cost. If it is generally used, the tax will be a burthen on no one at present, the city lands will rapidly extinguish the principal, and our posterity will enjoy free water on a free soil.

The act authorizing the construction of this aqueduct renders it impossible for the city council, or even the legislature, to render the water free until it is paid. By it a lien is given to the holders of the scrip issued for its payment on the water rents. And in case the Supreme Court should decide that they were reduced too low by the council, they have the power, on application of one hundred legal voters, to appoint commissioners, and fix the rates on such a basis as to them may seem proper for carrying out the intention of the Legislature in giving to the lenders this species of security for their money.

I have thus spoken of the origin and the progress of the work, and of the financial arrangements for the payment of the interest and the extinction of the debt.

There are no works so permanent as those connected with the supply of water.—Traces remain of the aqueducts of Greece and Rome. The well of Sychar, which Jacob dug and drank of with his children and his cattle, and which quenched the thirst of Him who brought the living water, still yields its treasures to the weary Arab. Like the generations of men, a constant succession in this stream will make it permanent, and we cannot but believe that they, who, centuries hence, occupy the three hills of Boston, will look back with gratitude to the men of this age, whose foresight and energy secured an unfailing well-spring for themselves and their descendants.

But of all the inhabitants, there will be none who will more fully appreciate the blessing, than those who like ourselves have felt its want. I would, therefore, in behalf of the citizens of Boston, express our obligations to those to whom we are indebted for the early supply of this blessing.

To the water Unions for the concerted action that aroused the attention of the public, and caused effectual steps to be taken.

To the State, for the charter given by her representatives, enabling us to go into the very heart of the commonwealth, and appropriate the waters of Lake Cochituate, and of all streams and sources within four miles of the same—but why should she not have granted it? This spot is proud of emphatically belonging to Massachusetts. We are honored as being her capital, and we derive the strength and enterprise that distinguishes us from her sons; this peninsula is the point to which their wealth and their energies particularly concentrate, and of the Merchant Princes whose palaces stand around us, few were the native born citizens of Boston. They have come from every valley and hill-side of New England — and in providing for the health and beauty of their metropolis, the Legislature have conferred a favor upon every inhabitant of the State, for there is no one who is not, directly or indirectly, by himself or his friends, connected with the old city of Boston.

Next to the State that gave us the power, our thanks are particularly due to those who have been entrusted with the executive management of this work. To the Water Commissioners, for their constant and judicious labors. To the consulting and resident engineers, for their scientific, unwearied attention; and to the contractors, who have gone forward with untiring zeal. From the moment of its commencement, the work has been unremitted; by day and by night, from noon to midnight and from midnight to noon, the labors of the hammer and of the spade have been incessant. The only hours of rest were those in which it has been said, in them "thou shalt do no manner of work."

Such labors have produced the most rapid and satisfactory results. But two years and two months have elapsed, since, as representative of the city, I had the honor of removing the first sod and commencing the undertaking. The second was lifted by the venerated hand of him who has since fallen, like Chatham, at his post, and whom with the eye of faith we now behold in the great company of those who partake of the River of Life freely. Had he been permitted to witness the conclusion, as he did the commencement, of this enterprise, and to stand here to see an assembled people waiting for the gush of water, how would the imagination of the old man have gone back over the lapse of ages to the Hill in Horeb. He would have told us that the existence and attributes of the Deity were more fully proved by a scene like this than when by the suspension of his laws he provided by a single act for a single people. That His wisdom had in every land prepared among the hills the receptacles of water. That His power had given fixed and permanent laws to the most unstable of elements. That His goodness enabled his intelligent offspring to understand and avail themselves of its use — thus giving the blessing of water as truly, now, to all his children, as he did to the chosen few, when, by the rod of his servant, he satisfied their thirst.

Fellow Citizens, our great work is accomplished. "Our bread shall be given us; our water is made sure."

FIRST CANAL IN LOWELL.*

Ever since the settlement of the country, much rafting business has been done on the Merrimack River. Its shores were covered with a forest, which furnished timber, lumber, and fuel, and it soon became an important object to float this down to Newburyport, either for shipbuilding there, or for transportation to other places. The chief difficulty attending this, was the passage of the Pawtucket Falls. Here was a descent of thirty-two feet — not perpendicular, but over several rapids, in circuitous channels, with a violent current, and amidst sharp-pointed rocks. To accomplish this descent with rafts was dangerous when the river was swollen, and was laborious when the river was low ; and this fact suggested the plan of a canal round the falls, by which the descent might be easily made. Accordingly an act was passed, June 27, 1792, incorporating Dudley Atkins Tyng, William Coombs, Joseph Tyler, Nicholas Johnson, and Joshua Carter, and such others as might join them, into “ a body politic and corporate forever, by the name of the Proprietors of Locks and Canals on Merrimack River,” with the usual powers granted to canal companies.

They soon commenced operations. They laid out the course of a canal from a point on the southern shore of Merrimack River, just above the falls, and, passing round them at a sweep of about a mile in distance, entered the Concord River, a few rods above its junction with the Merrimack. The canal was one mile and a half in length, and four locks accomplished the descent of thirty-two feet. The whole expenditure was fifty thousand dollars. The first boat passed through the canal in 1797. An incident which then occurred is well remembered by many now living. This being the first canal that was built in this country, hundreds of both sexes and of all ages had assembled to witness the passage of the first boat. They stood around and upon the first lock ; and as soon as the boat, containing the directors and invited gentlemen, had entered the lock, its sides suddenly gave way. Spectators and voyagers both were submerged, and were carried with great violence down the stream. Fortunately no life was lost. This inauspicious beginning was attended with consequences no more serious than an unexpected bath, and a great fright.

The stock of this canal was divided into five hundred shares, the owners of which were scattered throughout Middlesex and Essex counties. It proved to be poor property. Its value was greatly diminished by the bolder enterprise of the Middlesex Canal, connecting the Merrimack River, above the falls, with Boston Harbor. This was undertaken in 1793, and completed in 1804. Much of the lumber, which would otherwise have gone to Newburyport, was taken directly to Boston. Hence the shares of the Locks and Canals Company were easily obtained, at less than their par value, when it was proposed to use the waters of the canal for manufacturing purposes

“Charlestown, the mother of Boston, is much more populous than Cambridge, and exceeds it much in respect of trade, being situated between two rivers, Mystic river and Charles river, and parted from Boston only by the latter, over which there is a ferry so well tended, that a bridge would not be much more convenient, except in winter, when the ice will neither bear nor suffer a boat to move through it. Though the river is much broader about the town, it is not wider in the ferry passage than the Thames between London and Southwark. The profits of this ferry belong to Harvard College in Cambridge, and are considerable. The town is so large as to take up all the space between the two rivers. 'Tis beautified, with a handsome large church, a market-place by the river side, and two long streets leading down to it. The inferior court is held here the second Tuesday in March and December, and the superior the last Tuesday in January. Captain Uring writes that ‘Charlestown is divided from Boston by a large navigable river, which runs several miles up the country. It is near half as big, but not so conveniently situated for trade, though capable of being made as strong, it standing also on a peninsula. ’Tis said one thousand vessels clear annually from these two towns only, more than from all the European Colonies in America not in English hands.’”

CITY OF WORCESTER.*

The town of Worcester adopted the form of City Government in 1848. It is bounded north by Holden and West Boylston, east by Shrewsbury, south by Millbury and Auburn, and west by Leicester and Paxton.

* We copy the above notice of Worcester from Hayward's Gazetteer, a work which we commend to the public.

Worcester was formerly very large; it contained the territory of some of the adjoining towns. An attempt was made to settle this part of the country as early as 1675, but the hostility of the Indians was such as to prevent a permanent settlement until 1713, when Jonas Rice and family became permanent residents, on the 21st of October of that year. The Indians were very numerous; they had towns on Tatnuck and Boggachoag hills, and called the neighboring country Quinsigamond, the name of a lake, or long pond, which skirts the eastern border of the town.

It is stated that "in 1718 there were in the town fifty-eight humble dwelling-houses; some were furnished with windows of diamond glass," while others obtained the light "through the dim transparency of oiled paper."

Worcester is watered by numerous rivers, brooks, and rivulets. Mill brook, a branch of the Blackstone, and Tatnuck and Boggachoag rivers, and Turkey brook, branches of French river, are the principal. These streams, though not large, are constant, and furnish the town with a good hydraulic power. In 1845 the population of Worcester was eleven thousand five hundred and fifty-six.

In 1719 a meeting-house was built in Worcester, a church organized, and the Rev. Andrew Gardner ordained. Mr. Gardner's successors were, Rev. Isaac Burr, in 1725; Rev. Thaddeus Maccarty, in 1747; Rev. Samuel Austin, D.D., in 1790; Rev. Charles A. Goodrich, in 1816; Rev. Aretius B. Hull, in 1821; Rev. Rodney A. Miller, in 1827.

Second Church. The Rev. Aaron Bancroft was settled in 1786; Rev. Alonzo Hill, in 1827.

The public and private Schools, and other Literary Institutions in this town, are of a high order:—perhaps in no part of the world is education more cherished and honored than in Worcester.

The manufactures of Worcester are large and important; and in no town in New England are the domestic interests of the country more ardently cherished. In the year 1837, the value of its manufactures amounted to nearly eleven hundred thousand dollars; since which the amount has much increased, while many new operations have commenced, and new articles been manufactured. At that time, there were in Worcester eight woollen, five cotton, and two paper mills; an air and cupola furnace, nine woollen machinery factories, three tin factories, and manufacturers of coaches, chaises, boots, shoes, hats, cutlery, chairs, cabinet-ware, ploughs, straw bonnets, palm-leaf hats, wire, lead pipe, paper, machinery, &c.

VITAL STATISTICS OF MASSACHUSETTS.*

The seventh Annual Report of Massachusetts shows that there were returned to the Secretary of State 16,515 births, 5,287 marriages, and 11,346 deaths, that took place within the Commonwealth during the year ending April 30th, 1848.

This is not a complete account of these events within the whole State, for no returns of either Births, Marriages, or Deaths, were received from twenty-nine cities and towns; viz., Boston, Beverly, Wenham, Somerville, Dana, Phillipston, Upton, Conway, Heath, Northfield, Rowe, Adams, Becket, Cheshire, Hancock, Hinsdale, Stockbridge, Sandisfield, Worthington, Boston Corner, Fairhaven, Seekonk, Abington, Middleboro', Plymouth, Dennis, Marshpee, Welfleet and Truro. No returns of Births and Deaths were received from six towns, viz., Acton, Pelham, Greenfield, Shutesbury, Duxbury, and Stow. None of Marriages and Deaths from Munroe. None of Births from fourteen towns, viz., Andover, Boxboro', Concord, Woburn, Littleton, Boylston, Oxford, Cummington, Easthampton, Holland, Pittsfield, Richmond, Tyringham, and Williamstown. And none of Deaths from ten towns, viz., North Chelsea, Watertown, Athol, Ware, Chester, Palmer, Braintree, Brookline, Dartmouth, and Carver. Of the three hundred and fifteen cities and towns in the State, only two hundred and fifty-one made full reports, thirty-five made partial reports, and twenty-nine made none.

Beside these failures, the reports from some other towns are manifestly incomplete, the returning officer giving only such cases as came to his knowledge by accident or otherwise, without pretending to give all that had occurred within his town.

The Registration Reports do not show the frequency of Births, Marriages, or Deaths relative to the population of the whole State, nor do they afford any means of comparing the force of mortality in one district with that in another, or the value of life and the progress of population in this State with those in any other State or Country.

The following numbers are stated in the Registration Reports.

Year.	1842.	1843.	1844.	1845.	1846.	1847.	1848.	7 years.

Deaths, . .	9,544	10,684	8,338	8,844	9,350	11,063	11,346	69,169

The sexes of the children which were born are stated in the last five reports so far as they were received by the Secretary. They were, males, 39,945; females, 38,096.

The conditions of the persons who were married are stated in the reports from 1844 to 1848, inclusive. They were, bachelors, 17,511; widowers, 3,136; maids, 19,413; widows, 1,467.

The ages of the marrying parties are stated in the four last reports. Of those who were married for the first time, the ages were as follow:

	Under 20.	20 to 25.	25 to 30.	30 to 40.	Over 40.
Bachelors,	253	6,563	4,782	1,519	226

MASSACHUSETTS STATE PRISON.

Frederick Robinson, Warden; J. W. Bemis, Physician; Jared Curtis, Chaplain; Bradford Sumner, Samuel Greele, Abraham F. Howe, Inspectors.

There is no Institution in the Commonwealth better managed than this. The Warden is a man of intelligence and energy. He is a true friend to the prisoner,—and affords ample evidence that he understands how to reform the criminal. He merits the highest consideration for his untiring efforts to do good. We give the following particulars, which will afford some idea of the present condition of the Prison.

The whole number of convicts remaining in Prison October 1, 1847, was 288; the whole number of convicts received into the Prison during the year ending September 30, 1848, is 122. From Worcester Insane Hospital, where he had been sent from this Prison as insane, 1. Total, 410.

There is a LIBRARY of about 500 volumes at the Prison, and it must, indeed, be cheering to the philanthropist to see with what interest the prisoners take out the books to read—which they are permitted to do every Saturday afternoon. The Hon. Francis C. Gray has recently made a donation of fifty dollars to be expended for books to be added to the Library, and we hope that others may be induced to follow this good example. Contributions of money or books, we have no doubt, would be gladly received by the Warden.

NEW JAIL FOR SUFFOLK COUNTY.

We insert with pleasure the following description of this striking and important edifice as given by G. J. F. Bryant, Esq., the Architect.

The structure is located upon land recently purchased by the City of Boston of Dr. George Parkman, the heirs of Ward Jackson, deceased, and Robert G. Shaw, Esq., lying between North Grove Street and the "Commissioners line" of Charles River. The whole amount of land purchased for the site is 193,458 superficial feet, about one third of which will be appropriated for the contemplated extension of Charles street, in front of the west end of the building, and also for a City wharf west of the extension of this street. By this arrangement the edifice will front immediately upon Charles River, with no building whatever to separate it therefrom, and will at all times afford a striking object when viewed from the City of Cambridge, or from either of the great avenues forming the entrances to Boston from East and West Cambridge.

The jail will be "cruciform" in plan, and will consist of a "centre octagonal building," having "four wings" radiating from the north, south, east, and west sides thereof; the north, south, and east wings will contain the cells for the use of the prisoners, and the west wing will be appropriated for the Jailer's family, Officers' quarters, and the necessary incidental offices and apartments required for the building, together with a chapel and hospital therein.

The three wings containing the cells aforesaid are to be constructed upon the "Auburn Plan," so called, (being a prison within a prison) the north and south wings will each measure 80 feet 6 inches in length and 55 feet in width, and 56 feet in height above the surface of the ground; the block of cells within each of the north and south wings will measure 63 feet 6 inches in length, 21 feet in width, and 54 feet in height, and will be divided into five stories, each story will contain ten cells, each of which will measure 8 by 11 feet and 10 feet high, thus giving to each of these two wings 50 cells.

The east wing will measure 164 feet 6 inches in length, 55 feet in width, and 56 feet in height above the surface of the ground; the block of cells within this wing will be 147 feet 6 inches long, 21 feet wide, and 54 feet high; it will also be divided into 5 stories in height, each story will contain 24 cells of uniform size, with the cells of the northern and southern wings, before described, thus giving to this wing 120 cells.

The spaces around the outside of each block of cells in each of the before described wings (between the cell walls and the exterior walls of the said wings) are to be appropriated as "areas," which are to be open from the floor of the lower story of cells in each wing, up to the ceiling of the upper story of cells in said wings; galleries of iron will extend the entire length of each of these spaces, outside of the cells, on a level with each of the floors thereof; these galleries will form a communication with other galleries which are to encircle the interior of the "centre octagonal building" aforesaid, on the same uniform level with the first-named galleries. Each cell will contain a window and a door communicating immediately with the galleries of the "areas." The west wing will measure 55 feet in width, and 54 feet in length, and of uniform height with the three first named wings, it will be 4 stories in height, the lower one of which will contain the family kitchen and scullery of the Jailer; the second story will have the Jailer's office, Officers' rooms, and Jailer's family parlors; the third story will be devoted entirely to the sleeping rooms of the Jailer's family and officers, and the fourth story will be appropriated for the hospital and chapel of the prison.

The "centre octagonal building" will measure 70 feet square, and 85 feet in height above the surface of the ground. It will be but two stories in height, the lower one of which will contain the great kitchen, scullery, bakery, and laundry, and will be on a uniform level with the lower story of cells in each of the three wings which contain the same. The upper story will be finished as one "great central guard and inspection room," reaching from the ceiling of the first story up to the roof of the building; this room will measure 70 feet square, and will contain the galleries and stair-cases connecting with the galleries around the outside of the cells in the three wings aforesaid.

All the "areas" around the outside of the cells of the north, south, and east wings will receive light from the great windows in the exterior walls of said wings; these windows will be thirty in number, each measuring 10 feet in width, and 33 feet in height, beneath which other windows, 10 feet wide and 9 feet in height, will be placed, thus yielding an amount of light to the interior of the cells probably four times as great as that in any prison yet constructed upon the Auburn system, and far greater than that received into the cells of those prisons constructed with their cells connected with the exterior walls of the structure, where, in every instance, so far as the knowledge of the writer extends, the cell windows have invariably been much too diminutive. The "jail kitchen," and "guard or inspection room" of the "centre octagonal" building will receive light from windows of uniform size, and arranged in the same manner as those windows in the exterior walls of the wings, the "guard or inspection room" will receive additional light from circular windows, placed above the great windows, and from a sky-light in its ceiling. The various stories of the west wing will be lighted from windows arranged uniformly with those in the exterior walls of the wings aforesaid.

The exterior of the structure will be entirely of Quincy granite formed with split ashler in courses, with cornices, and other projecting portions hammered or dressed; the remaining portions of the entire buildings, both inside and outside thereof, will be of bricks, iron, and stone, excepting the interior of the "west wing," which will be finished with wood in the usual manner of dwelling houses.

In arranging the exterior of the building, the aim has been to produce a bold, striking effect to the eye, without expensive outlay for architectural detail or ornament of any kind; the great size of the windows, with their semicircular heads, united with the large projecting corbel cornice, which crowns the building, will together present an impression strongly in keeping with the proposed uses of the structure.

In maturing the plan of this edifice, our late efficient Mayor, the Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr., has called to his aid the services of practical gentlemen, who are conversant with the interior arrangement of prisons, as well as the real wants of Suffolk County in this particular.
